

Exchange Rate Dynamics

A Modern Analysis of Exchange Rate Theory and Evidence

Eric J. Pentecost

*Department of Economics
Loughborough University
Leicestershire, UK*

Edward Elgar

|           |   |     |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 5.4       | The econometric evidence                                      | 118 |
| 5.5       | Conclusions   | 125 |
| Appendix: | Mathematics of saddle path equilibria                         | 127 |
| 6  | The currency substitution approach                     |     |
| 6.1       | Introduction  | 129 |
| 6.2       | The instantaneous asset market adjustment models              | 130 |
| 6.3       | A model with slow asset market adjustment                     | 141 |
| 6.4       | Empirical evidence for currency substitution                  | 147 |
| 6.5       | Conclusions   | 150 |
| 7  | The portfolio balance approach                         |     |
| 7.1       | Introduction  | 151 |
| 7.2       | A portfolio balance model                                     | 152 |
| 7.3       | The econometric evidence                                      | 165 |
| 7.4       | Risk premia   | 172 |
| 7.5       | Conclusions   | 176 |
| 8  | Recent and future directions for research              |     |
| 8.1       | Introduction  | 179 |
| 8.2       | Exchange rate expectations and survey data                    | 180 |
| 8.3       | Chaos and non-linear dynamics                                 | 184 |
| 8.4       | Target zones  | 189 |
| 8.5       | New directions for structural models                          | 193 |
| Appendix: | Some mathematics and tests of non-linear and chaotic dynamics | 196 |
|           | References   | 199 |
|           | Author index   | 215 |
|           | Subject index  | 219 |