Private Power and Global Authority

Transnational Merchant Law in the Global Political Economy

A. Claire Cutler

University of Victoria, British Columbia
Contents

Acknowledgments xi
Acronyms and abbreviations xiii

1 Introduction 1

2 Conceptualizing the role of law in the global political economy 16
   Juridification, pluralization, and privatization 17
   Private and public international trade law 32
   Four liberal myths 54

3 Theorizing the role of law in the global political economy 60
   Problematic nature of locating "authority" 62
   Theoretical approaches to international relations and law 70
   Conventional theoretical approaches 74
   Unconventional theoretical approaches 81
   Social forces, law, and world order 100
   Historical development of the law merchant 104

4 Medieval lex mercatoria 108
   Medieval jus commune and jus gentium 112
   Law-creation and enforcement under the medieval law merchant 125

5 State-building: constituting the public sphere and disembedding the private sphere 141
   Nationalizing and localizing the law merchant 144
   Law-creation, enforcement, and nation-states 162
Contents

6 The modern law merchant and the mercatocracy 180
   The unification movement and world order 184
   Law-creation: unification through public and private authorities 191
   History of the unification movement 207
   Dispute settlement: the privileging of the private 225
   Unification and global authority 236

7 Conclusion: Transnational merchant law and global authority: a crisis of legitimacy 241
   The “problem of the subject” 244
   The disjunction between theory and practice:
   international law as dialectic 249
   Recasting the story: imagining international law
   as praxis 257

References 263
Cases cited 294
International treaties and United Nations documents 295
Index 298