

WRESTLING WITH THE DIVINE

---

A JEWISH RESPONSE TO SUFFERING

Shmuel Boteach

JASON ARONSON INC.
Northvale, New Jersey
London

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

I

The Belief in Reward and Punishment

Overview to Part I—If Judaism Is to Live Again: The Problem of Suffering	3
1 Without Ulterior Motives: The Problem with Divine Rewards	11
2 The Reward for a Mitzvah Is the Mitzvah Itself	21
3 The Lowest of Worlds Destined to Be the Highest	29
4 Making God the Host: The Choice to Give Up Choice	39
5 An Obligation to Love God	45
6 Love of God Is Torah, and Fear of God Is Mitzvot	51
7 Answering the Original Questions: Why Reward and Punishment Is Central to Judaism	59
8 The Agony of Inner Tension: Self-Negation versus Affirmation	73
9 The Dual Nature of God: Masculine and Feminine within the Godhead	83

---

II
The Problem of Suffering:
Reconciling the Benevolent God
with the Existence of Evil

Overview to Part II—To Challenge the Divine	101
10 Flawed Theories of a Lesser God	109
11 The Nature of Nothingness: The Need for God in Creation	125
12 The “Customs” of Nature	135
13 When Nature Becomes a Miracle	141
14 The Case for and against the Existence of Evil	149
15 A Mature View of Punishment	159
16 When Leaving This World Is an Act of Kindness	169
17 “Nothing Evil Descends from on High”	175
18 Challenging God on His Own Terms	183
19 In the Tradition of Abraham: The Obligation to Affirm Life	193
20 Death: The Final Challenge	205
21 The Request for a Less-Painful Means	221
22 Does Challenging God Make One a Heretic?	233
23 Rising Above Fate and Creating Our Own Destiny	241
24 Learning from the Holocaust	249
Epilogue Dawn of the Messianic Era and the End of All Pain	267
Bibliography	287
Index	289