Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction
The Pampered Eye 1

Chapter One
Vergil and Ovid: The Sufferance of Vision 18
  Meeting and Acknowledgment 20
  The Prospect: Distance and Its Ironies 33
  Ovid: Hiddenness and the Invasive Eye 41
  Ovid and the Sufferance of Exposure 59

Chapter Two
Streams Entering through the Eyes: Vision and Genre in Book 2 of The Faerie Queene 66
  Genre, Imitation, and Epideictic: The Spectacle of Belphoebe 67
  In the Absence of Belphoebe: Guyon and the Allegorical Epic 82
  The Pressures of Genre: Canto 12 99
Chapter Three
The Human Form: Surfaces and Secrets
The Integrity of the Female Form: Virginity in Ovid and Spenser 118
“So many heauenly faces”: The Envisioning of Women 132

Chapter Four
Vision and Defense
“All suddenly abasht she chaunged hew” 155
The Wary Eye, the Spying Eye: The Defensiveness and Exposure of Malbecco 176
The Ethics of Ceremonial Display: Exposure and Abashedness in Wedding 186

Chapter Five
The Invidious Eye: Spenser’s Publications, 1595—1596 199
The Mythologizing of Ralegh’s Marriage 200
Opacity of Countenance and Control of the Body: Book 5 of The Faerie Queene 209
Social Decorum: Tact and the Liberation from the Tyranny of the Public Gaze in Book 6 of The Faerie Queene 222

Conclusion
Faune, nympharum fugientum amator 241

Index of Episodes from Epics 251

General Index 253