

The Foundations of Austrian Economics from Menger to Mises

A Critico-Historical Retrospective of Subjectivism

Allen Oakley

The University of Newcastle, Australia

Edward Elgar

Cheltenham, UK • Lyme, US

Contents

Preface	ix
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Preamble	1
1.2 Defining subjectivism and individualism	4
1.3 The inquiries ahead	8
② Germanic foundations	17
2.1 Preamble	17
2.2 The rise of the Historical School	19
2.3 Droysen's subjectivist philosophy of history	24
2.4 Austrian philosophy	31
2.5 Germanic subjectivist economics	35
2.6 Situating Menger and Mises	37
3 Carl Menger's seminal subjectivist legacy	50
③.1 Preamble	50
3.2 A subjectivist ontology of economic phenomena	56
3.3 Epistemological intentions and methodological realities	70
③.4 Critical reflections and open questions	84
④ Wilhelm Dilthey and subjectivism: the human sciences	90
4.1 Introduction: from natural to human science	90
4.2 A descriptive psychology of individuals	96
4.3 Human agents in their life-world situations	103
4.4 Agents' expressions and the foundations of the human sciences	112
4.5 Conclusions and inconclusions	118
⑤ Metatheory of the sciences of culture and of Man	125
5.1 Historical-cultural science and the science of Man	125
5.2 Neo-Kantian historical-cultural science	128
5.3 Empirical reality and scientific inquiry	130
5.4 A metatheory of the historical-cultural sciences	133
5.5 Ontology in Rickert's metatheory	137
5.6 Rickert's rejection of human science	142
5.7 Rickert's legacy	145

6	Human agents and rationality in Max Weber's metatheory for the human sciences	148
6.1	Preamble	148
6.2	Introduction to Max Weber	150
6.3	The problem of human agency in economic theory	155
6.4	The individual human agent and rationality	158
6.5	Human agents in situ	164
6.6	Ontology, rationality and ideal types	168
6.7	Conclusion: outstanding problems with agent rationality	171
7	Mises and the subjectivism of economic action	176
7.1	Introduction	176
7.2	Philosophical orientations	178
7.3	Praxeology: Kantian and realist perspectives	188
7.4	Human action and human agency	193
7.5	Time and human action	202
7.6	From praxeology to the realities of human agency	207
7.7	Concluding observations	219
8	A retrospective summary	224
	Bibliography	241
	Index	253