

Washington and the Fall of Portugal's Colonial Empire

Witney W. Schneidman

with a Foreword by Frank C. Carlucci, III

University Press of America,[®] Inc.
Dallas · Lanham · Boulder · New York · Oxford

Contents

Foreword	xi
Preface	xiii
Map of Africa	xvii

Chapter 1

Kennedy and Salazar: Africa Versus the Azores

New Strains on American Foreign Policy	1
The Problem of Portugal	5
Snapping Impatient Fingers	11
The Empire Falters	13
Abetting the Conspiracy in Lisbon	16
Washington: The Battle in the Bureaucracy	19
Leaning Toward the More Modern Groups	22
Portuguese War—American Arms	26
Portugal's Countermoves	28
The Dilemma of the Azores	30
Playing to Portugal	33
Retreat at the United Nations	36
The Portuguese Façade	41
The Kennedys and Mondlane	43
The Stalemate in Africa	46
"Seeking the Best of Both Worlds"	51
The Time Factor	56
Endnotes	60

Chapter 2:

Lyndon Johnson and Africa: The Right Policy for the Wrong Reasons

The Chinese Discover Africa	59
Playing the China Card	61
Anderson Prods Portugal	63

Trying to Maintain Portugal's Confidence	66
Offering "Carrots" to Portugal	68
Preempting Racial Lobbies	74
The Need for an Africa Policy	76
A Policy in Search of Direction	78
The Fragile Opposition Parties	81
"Evolving a Story on Africa"	85
The "Jugular Problems" of Southern Africa	87
Goldberg Weighs In	92
The Johnson Plan for Africa	94
The Twilight of Concern	97
The Demise of a Policy	100

Chapter 3:

Nixon, Caetano, and Spínola: Partners in Uncertainty

The Structure of Peace	105
The New Portugal	108
Friends in the White House	112
Designing "Tar Baby"	114
"The Whites Are Here to Stay"	118
A Ticket to the Azores	121
Rogers in Africa	124
The Stalemated Guerilla Wars	125
A New Desperation in Lisbon	128
Focusing the Attention of Washington	132
The Coup in Portugal	136
Misreading the Conspiracy	139
The Revolution of Red Carnations	142
"If You Kick Portugal Hard Enough . . ."	145
Endnotes	172

Chapter 4:

Kissinger, Carlucci, and Portugal's Revolution

The Embassy's Credibility Problem	151
Kissinger's Kerensky	153
Carlucci Takes Over	159
"The Communist Drive for Power"	164
"The Only Game in Town"	170

The Trojan Horse in NATO.....	177
-------------------------------	-----

Chapter 5:

Angola's Transition to Independence

The Scramble for Africa—Again.....	187
Angola Slips Away.....	191
Mr. Guinea-Bissau.....	193
Alvor: The Portuguese Want Out.....	197
A Favorable Situation.....	202
Moscow's "End-Run" Around Détente.....	205
Changing Objectives in Angola.....	208
Neto's "Cheap" Victory.....	211
Holding the Line on Angola.....	212
Endgame on Angola.....	217

Chapter 6:

Conclusion

Transitioning to the Opposition.....	228
The Postcolonial Legacy.....	229

Appendix.....	233
List of Acronyms.....	237
Endnotes.....	237
Acknowledgments.....	277
Index.....	283