

The figural and the literal

Problems of language
in the history of science and philosophy, 1630–1800

Edited by Andrew E. Benjamin,
Geoffrey N. Cantor and John R. R. Christie

Manchester University Press

Contents

Contributors	page vi
Prefatory Note	vii
1 Introduction: rhetoric and writing in early modern philosophy and science John R. R. Christie	1
2 Descartes' fable: the Discours de la Méthode Andrew E. Benjamin	10
3 Hobbes's two theories of meaning George MacDonald Ross	31
4 Robert Boyle: scepticism and authority in seventeenth-century chemical discourse Jan V. Golinski	58
5 The Ark in flames: science, language and education in seventeenth-century England Tony Davies	83
6 The perfect cheat: Locke and empiricism's rhetoric Geoff Bennington	103
7 Weighing light: the role of metaphor in eighteenth-century optical discourse Geoffrey N. Cantor	124
8 Figures of the unthinkable: Diderot's materialist metaphors Michael Moriarty	147
9 Polite culture in commercial society Stephen Copley	176
10 Adam Smith's metaphysics of language John R. R. Christie	202