Modernism in Poetry: Motivations, Structures and Limits

Rainer Emig

Longman
London and New York
Contents

Foreword vii
Acknowledgements ix

Introduction 1

1. Problems of the Sign: Gerard Manley Hopkins (1844-89) 10
   1. The changing concepts of the sign 10
   2. A poetry of struggle 12
   3. Signification as appropriation: 'inscape' 13
   4. Signification as distancing 21
   5. The empty sign: signification and 'selving' 27
   6. Modernist Hopkins 33

2. The Symbolic Approach and its Limits: W.B. Yeats (1865-1939) 37
   1. The functions of the symbol 37
   2. Symbols and symbolism in Yeats's early poems 39
   3. Objective symbolism 44
   4. Subjective symbolism 46
   5. Symbols and history 50
   6. The limit of the symbol: imagination 55

   1. The birth of modernism 61
   2. The structure of the metaphor 63
   3. Metaphors in Eliot's early poetry 65
   4. The structure and effects of the metonymy 69
   5. Absence as structure: The Waste Land 73
   6. From network to pattern: Four Quartets 80
Contents

1. Myth as frame and supplement 88
2. Personae and myth in Pound's early poems 93
3. Fragments of culture 99
4. Imagism as anti-mythical myth-making 106
5. The trap of tradition: Hugh Selwyn Mauberley 110
6. The materiality of The Cantos 113
7. The order of The Cantos: archive and periplos 115
8. Self-inflicted blindness and the power of modernism 118

5. Modernist Poetry as a Universal Compensation Strategy 123
1. Internal problems and lost outsides 123
2. Strategies of stabilisation 124
3. Approaching the limits of modernism 129

6. Modernist Poetry and Psychoanalysis 133
1. Poetry and psychoanalysis: intersections of the modernist project 133
2. Poetry's synthetic consciousness and psychoanalytic concepts of the self 136
3. The writer and his doubles 141
4. Metaphor, metonymy, symbol and their psychoanalytic counterparts 148
5. Signs of desire / the desire of signs 167

7. Towards an Economy of the Modernist Poem 172
1. The text as an economy of meaning 172
2. The stability of the mirror 173
3. Artificial creation: symbolic values 179
4. Stable investments: reification 185
5. Conspicuous waste: loss and dissolution as limits of modernism 191

8. Modernist Poetry and Language Philosophy 207
1. Cognition and language 207
2. Nietzsche's radical redefinition of truth 209
3. Wittgenstein's distrust of language 216
4. Heidegger: language as the house of Being 222

Defying Conclusions: Opening up Modernism 237

Bibliography 247

Index 264