

CHIPEMBERE: THE MISSING YEARS

*The saints of today may be the heroes of tomorrow,
the villains of today may be saints tomorrow,
it may be after their death.*

*So, although today I may be condemned,
I may be declared a traitor,
I know that ultimately, however long it may take,
my stand will be justified.*

Henry Chipembere, 9 September 1964

Colin Baker

Kachere Books no. 25

Kachere Series

Zomba

2008

CONTENTS

Preface	9
Part One
Before the 1959 State of Emergency	13
Detention, March 1959 to September 1960	23
Release from Detention, September 1960	29
Trial and Imprisonment, February 1961 to January 1963	36
Ministerial Office, February 1963 to July 1964	59
Revolt, July-August 1964	69
Attempts at Reconciliation, September and October 1964	101
Restriction and Escape to the Bush, October 1964 to January 1965	108
Attempted Coup d'Etat, February 1965	114
Evacuation from Malawi, April 1965	134
The USA, May 1965 to August 1966	148
Tanzania, August 1966 to June 1969	163
The USA, June 1969 to September 1975	170
Part Two
Chipembere's Evidence to the Devlin Commission: 1959	184
To All Supporters of the ex-Ministers	239
The African Lakes Corporation	241
Dr. Banda's Opposition in Exile	247
My Malawi Ancestors	250
Malawi in Crisis, 1964	272
Seminar, University of California at Los Angeles Feb 1 st 1971	288
Aspects of Malawi's Struggle for Independence	309
Malawi's Growing Links with South Africa	319
Kenyan and Tanzanian Socialism: A Comparative Study	338
Recollections of Ian Michael	350
Part Three
Epilogue	353
Notes	376
Index	399