

Ironic victory

LIBERALISM IN POST-LIBERATION
SOUTH AFRICA

EDITED BY R W JOHNSON

AND DAVID WELSH

with the assistance of LIBBY HUSEMEYER

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cape Town / 1998

Contents

CONTRIBUTORS	vii
PREFACE BY HELEN SUZMAN	xi
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	xii
INTRODUCTION: THE LIBERAL INHERITANCE DAVID WELSH	1
1 The new constitution: a triumph for liberalism? A positive view JOHN DUGARD	23
2 The new constitution: a triumph for liberalism? Some doubts ANTHEA JEFFERY	31
3 Liberalism and politics PATRICK LAURENCE	45
4 Must contemporary South African liberals be Thatcherites? CHARLES SIMKINS	55
5 The rule of law since 1994 ANTHEA JEFFERY	73
6 Liberal institutions under pressure: The universities R W JOHNSON	141
7 Closer to home: student unrest and the welfare function CHARLES VAN ONSELEN	161
8 Liberal institutions under pressure: The press KEN OWEN	175
9 The press since 1994 MARTIN WILLIAMS	191

10	What role for the churches in the new South Africa? RACHEL TINGLE	199
11	Freedom of education: a privilege or a right? MONICA BOT, assisted by Dee Wingate	225
12	Oppositions, difficulties, and tensions between liberalism and African thought M W MAKGOBA	265
13	Why are there so few black liberals? THEMBA SONO	293
14	The best of enemies? Black intellectuals and white liberals R W JOHNSON	307
15	Affirmative action: is the light worth the candle? RACHEL C C JAFTA	321
16	The holy cause that ends in tears DENIS BECKETT	337
17	Liberalism, democracy, race relations, and the rising black middle class in South Africa LAWRENCE SCHLEMMER	349
18	Liberalism and the future of South Africa's new democracy R W JOHNSON	375
	NOTES	391
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	397
	INDEX	410