

Writers on the Market

Consuming Literature
in Early Seventeenth-Century Spain

Donald Gilbert-Santamaría

Lewisburg
Bucknell University Press

Contents

Acknowledgments	9
Introduction: Economics, Literature, and the Choler of a Seated Spaniard	13
Part I: Playing to the Masses: Lope de Vega and the Comedia
1. Economic Rationalism and the Arte nuevo	23
2. Marketing Myths: El caballero de Olmedo	41
3. Violence, Agency, and the Audience in Fuenteovejuna	63
Part II: Markets, Morality, and Violence in the Picaresque Novel: Mateo Alemán's Guzmán de Alfarache
4. Picaresque Poetics	85
5. Subjects and Objects in the Guzmán	109
6. Generic Flux	130
Part III: Selling the Subject: Cervantes and the Quijote
7. Cardenio's Madness	149
8. Selling out Sancho	165
9. Histrionics and the Novel	190
Notes	215
Bibliography	255
Index	265