

Language Policy

David Cassels Johnson
Washington State University, USA

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of figures and tables	x1
General Editors' preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
 Part I Laying the Groundwork: Definitions, Theories, and Concepts
1 What is language policy?	3
1.1 Definitions	4
1.2 Types	9
1.3 Example language policies	12
1.3.1 A brief history of English language policies	12
1.3.2 Indigenous languages and policy	16
1.3.3 Oil production and language policy in Equatorial Guinea	20
1.4 Discussion	24
2 Theories, concepts, and frameworks: An historical overview	26
2.1 The origin and development of early language planning scholarship	27
2.2 Expanding frameworks and conceptualizations in the 1970's and 80's	30
2.2.1 Dell Hymes' sociolinguistics	30
2.2.2 Critical (socio)linguistics	32
2.2.3 Expanding frameworks in language planning and policy	33
2.3 Critical language policy (CLP)	39
2.4 Ethnography of language policy	43
2.5 Reversing language shift and linguistic imperialism	47
2.5.1 Reversing language shift	47
2.5.2 Linguistic imperialism	49
2.6 Ecology of language	51
2.7 Educational language policy	52
2.8 Discussion	55

Part II Findings

3	Example studies	59
3.1	Marilyn Martin-Jones	60
3.2	Feliciano Chimbutane	64
3.3	Florence Bonacina	69
3.4	Angela Cincotta-Segi	75
3.5	Francis M. Hult	80
3.6	Lin Pan	82
3.7	Dafna Yitzhaki	85
3.8	Shannon Fitzsimmons-Doolan	88
3.9	Discussion	91
4	Findings	95
4.1	Appropriation vs. implementation	96
4.1.1	Finding #1: Language policy agents have power	98
4.1.2	Finding #2: Language policy power is differentially allocated among arbiters and implementers	100
4.2	Language policies as instruments of power	101
4.2.1	Finding #3: Governing bodies use language policies for control	102
4.3	Language policies as instruments of empowerment	103
4.3.1	Finding #4: National multilingual language policies can and do open spaces for multilingual education and minority languages	103
4.3.2	Finding #5: Local multilingual language policies can and do open spaces for multilingual education and minority languages	105
4.4	The multiple layers of policy text, discourse, and practice	105
4.4.1	Finding #6: Top-down and bottom-up are relative	108
4.4.2	Finding #7: Macro multilingual language policies are not necessarily enough	108
4.4.3	Finding #8: Local multilingual language policies are not necessarily enough either	109
4.4.4	Finding #9: Meso-level language policies matter	110
4.5	The nature of language policy text and discourse	111
4.5.1	Finding #10: National language policies are not necessarily ideologically consistent	111

4.5.2	Finding #11: Policy intentions are especially difficult to ascertain	113
4.5.3	Finding #12: Language policy language constitutes its own genre	117
4.6	Conclusion	117
Part III Researching Language Policy
5	Research approaches and methods	121
5.1	Early language planning work	121
5.2	Historical-textual analysis	124
5.3	Political theory and the law	128
5.3.1	Judicial decisions and the courts	129
5.3.2	Language policy and political identity	132
5.3.3	National identity, citizenship, and language	133
5.3.4	Constitutional and statutory interpretation	137
5.4	Media discourse and LPP	140
5.5	Ethnography of language policy	144
5.5.1	Definitions, benefits, and challenges	144
5.5.2	Method	149
5.6	Discourse analysis	152
5.6.1	Critical discourse analysis	154
5.6.2	Intertextuality, interdiscursivity, and recontextualization	158
5.6.3	Criticism of CDA	164
5.6.4	Linguistic anthropology and speech chains	166
5.7	Discussion	168
6	Educational language policy engagement and action research (ELPEAR)	170
6.1	Action research	170
6.2	Language policy action research	174
6.2.1	The language policy action research cycle	175
6.2.2	Features of language policy action research	178
6.3	ELPEAR examples	180
6.3.1	Neville Alexander and PRAESA	180
6.3.2	Rebecca Freeman	184
6.3.3	Richard Hill and Stephen May	186
6.4	David Corson's model for critical policymaking in schools	188

6.5	Language policy engagement: Creation	190
6.5.1	Macro-level language policy creation	192
6.5.1.1	Engaging politicians	194
6.5.1.2	Grassroots organization and political activism	195
6.5.1.3	The courts	197
6.5.1.4	Engaging the media	198
6.5.2	Micro-level language policy creation	206
6.6	Language policy engagement: Interpretation	210
6.7	Language policy engagement: Appropriation	212
6.8	Discussion	213
7	Research direction(s) and model projects	215
7.1	Topics and contexts	216
7.2	Access and positionality	220
7.3	Research questions and organizing data collection	224
7.3.1	Creation	224
7.3.2	Interpretation	232
7.3.3	Appropriation	236
7.4	Data collection and analysis	239
7.5	Example analyses	253
7.6	Discussion	259
Part IV Resources
8	Further resources	263
8.1	Books	263
8.2	Journals	265
8.3	Professional organizations and conferences	267
8.4	Organizations and projects concerning language policy and education	267
8.5	Example language policies	268
8.6	Electronic mailing lists which feature LPP information	269
8.7	Websites	269
References		271
Index		290