

JUNG'S WANDERING ARCHETYPE

Race and religion in analytical psychology

Carrie B. Dohe

 Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
LONDON AND NEW YORK

CONTENTS

List of figures	vii
Acknowledgments	viii
Abbreviations and readers' guide	x
1 "Something like Wotan"?	1
2 "Because we Germanic people still have a genuine barbarian in us": on ancient ethnographers, humanist thinkers, and modern theorists of primitive religion, or where Jung got his ideas	20
3 A "far finer and more comprehensive task for psychoanalysis": science, religion, and self-redemption in analytical psychology	51
4 The "paleontology of the soul": the concept of primitivity and Jung's theory of the stratified phylogenetic unconscious	84
5 "Baldr comes home": from the paleontology of the soul to the invention of a Germanic mythology	118
6 Wotan and "the archetypal Ergriffenheit ": a tragedy in three parts	159
7 "After the catastrophe": wandering diagnoses and changing relationships post-"Wotan"	192
8 The "most complicated psychology": the reception of analytical psychology in contemporary Heathenism	210

CONTENTS

9	Conclusion: “man as he was – and will always be”? Racial essentialism, scientific discourse, and new spiritualities	240
	Index	250

FIGURES

- 2.1 The Cheruscan leader Hermann and the reformer Martin Luther. An illustration from the satirical magazine Kladderadatsch (1875) commemorating the unveiling of the Hermann Memorial in Detmold, Germany. Hermann declares that he conquered; Luther, that he will. The common enemy, Rome, appears in the background. 27
- 4.1 Jung's 1927 model of the phylogenetic unconscious as a multi-storied house. This represents the house as Jung described it in his 1927 lecture "The Earth Conditionality of the Psyche" to the School of Wisdom's "Man and Earth" Conference in Darmstadt, Germany. Illustration by Christiane Strobach, ©2015. All rights reserved. 85
- 5.1 Eduard Schwechten, 1896, Das Lied von Levi, p. 13, illustrations by Siegfried Horn. This illustration shows that Jung's portrayals of Jews, blacks and Native Americans as essentially primitive in an infantile sense were hardly his own invention, but were common stereotypes in his day. 137
- 5.2 Jung's concept of primitivity in relation to modern mass society, Jews, and people of Germanic stock. Illustration by Christiane Strobach, ©2015. All rights reserved. 139