

THE FAILURE OF DEMOCRATIC POLITICS IN FIJI

STEPHANIE LAWSON

CLARENDON PRESS · OXFORD
1991

Contents

List of Tables	xii
Abbreviations	xiii
Map 1. Fiji Islands: Principal Islands and Towns	xiv
Map 2. Fiji Islands: Provinces	xv
Introduction	1
1. Constitutional Opposition and Democratic Politics	12
Democratic Politics	12
Political Parties and Party Systems	14
Limited Majority Rule and Constitutional Opposition	17
Typologies of Party Systems	19
Democratic Politics and the Dynamics of Party Competition	22
The Conduct of Political Debate	28
Constitutional Opposition and Institutional Legitimacy in Non-Western States	31
Pluralism and the Plural Society	35
The Consociational Alternative	40
2. The Early Colonial Basis of Politics in Fiji	45
The Colonization of Fiji	45
The Doctrine of 'Paramouncy of Fijian Interests'	58
Indirect Rule and the Separate Administration	60
The Land	72
Labour	78
3. Europeans, Fijians, and the Neo-Traditional Order in the Crown Colony System	81
The Nature of Crown Colony Rule	81
The First Franchise	82
Traditional Chiefs in the Crown Colony System	85
Land and the Triumph of Gordon's Orthodoxy	88

Developments in the Separate Administration	91
Chiefly Rule and Neo-Traditional Organization	93
Chiefly Leadership and the Interpretation of Tradition	104
The Return to Indirect Rule	111
The Politics of Fijian Dissent	117
4. Indians and the Franchise	124
The Early Struggle for Representation	124
The Indenture System and Political Rights	128
The Abolition of Indenture	132
The Establishment of Communal Franchise	136
The Continued Quest for Common Roll	143
5. Towards Independence: Institutional Change and the Emergence of the Party System	158
The Context of Change	158
The Trade Union Movement	159
The Consolidation of Communalism and the Foundations of Party Politics	163
Constitutional Reform	170
The Development of Political Parties and the Party System	175
The 1966 Elections and Their Aftermath	180
Independence and the 1970 Constitution	184
The Entrenchment of Indigenous Rights	188
The Implications of the Communal Electoral System for Politics in Independent Fiji	191
6. Political Parties and the Party System in Independent Fiji	195
The Basis of Party Government	195
The General Election of 1972	196
Intra-Party Discontent and the Nationalist Challenge	201
1977: The Fall and Rise of the Alliance	208
A Government of National Unity	220
The General Election of 1982	224
Continuity with the Past	232

7. The Test for Democratic Politics in Fiji	234
The Rise of Labour	234
The Plural Society Syndrome and the 1987 Campaign	241
Corruption and its Implications for the Coup	246
The Question of External Involvement in the Coup	248
A Change of Government	250
The Downfall of the Bavadra Government	255
Justifying the Coup	259
The Foreign Policy Strategies of the Post-Coup Regime	261
Politics in the Post-Coup Fiji	266
Return to the Status Quo?	275
 Conclusion	 277
Postscript	289
Bibliography	291
Index	305