

THE
UNITED STATES AND NORTH AFRICA

A Cognitive Approach to Foreign Policy

AZZEDINE LAYACHI

PRAEGER

New York
Westport, Connecticut
London

Contents

Exhibits	ix
Abbreviations	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
Introduction: The Psychology of Foreign Policy	1
1. Issues and Policies	8
The Maghreb in History	8
America's Encounter with the Maghreb	11
Images and U.S.-Moroccan Relations	16
The U.S. and Algeria: New Realities, Old Images	30
2. Images in Foreign Policy	53
The Individual and Foreign Policy Making	53
Cognitive Studies of Foreign Policy	60
Methodology of Image Reconstruction and Analysis	63
Analytical Features of Cognitive Maps	70
Mapping Decision Makers	74
Policy Implications of Cognitive Characteristics	77
Data Collection, Coding, and Measurement	80
3. Policy Implications of Cognitive Maps: The Case of Arms Sales to Morocco	87
U.S. Official Images on Arms Sales to Morocco	89
U.S. Private Images on Arms Sales to Morocco	115

4. The Cognitive Dimension of Foreign Economic Policy: The Case of U.S.-Algerian Liquefied Natural Gas Trade	137
Politics of International Energy Contracts	137
U.S. Official Images on the El Paso LNG Project	142
U.S. Private Images on the El Paso LNG Project	152
Conclusion: Theoretical and Empirical Findings	171
Images in Foreign Policy Conduct and Analysis	171
Empirical and Theoretical Meanings of the Results	175
Contributions of the Cognitive Perspective	180
Appendix 1: Special Multiplication and Addition Rules	185
Appendix 2: Interview Questions	187
Selected Bibliography	189
Index	199