Marx, Schumpeter, & Keynes

A Centenary Celebration of Dissent

Suzanne W. Helburn and
David F. Bramhall, editors

M. E. Sharpe, Inc.
Armonk, New York
London, England

Table of Contents

Preface vii

Contributors x

Introduction 3

Part One: Economics, Politics, and Science

1 Economics and Political Economy: Marx, Keynes, and Schumpeter
Robert L. Heilbroner 13

2 Evaluation of Scientific Research Programs in Economics
Suzanne W. Helburn 27

3 Economics and Cartesian Science
David Bramhall 45

Part Two: Marx

4 Marx's Research Program
Suzanne W. Helburn 67

5 Philosophy and Economics in the Writings of Karl Marx
E. K. Hunt 95

6 Karl Marx: Economist or Revolutionary?
Harry Cleaver 121

Part Three: Schumpeter

7 Schumpeter's Research Program
Suzanne W. Helburn 149

8 The Entrepreneur in Marx and Schumpeter
Mark Blaug 167

Response: Is Schumpeter Compatible with Neoclassical Economics?
Marcellus Andrews 179

9 The Entrepreneur in Marx and Schumpeter: A Post-Keynesian Perspective
Jeffrey Young 183

Part Four: Keynes

10 Keynes's Research Program
Suzanne W. Helburn 199

11 Keynes and Our Current Discontents
Donald E. Moggridge 232

Response: On Rereading Keynes Today
Walter S. Salant 250

Response: Keynes, Capital, and Current Discontents
Cheryl Smith 258

Part Five: Research and Policy Analysis in the Marxist, Schumpeterian, and Keynesian Traditions

12 Empirical Research in the Marxist and Schumpeterian Traditions: Reflections on Explaining Spatial Change
Ann Roell Markusen 267

13 The Crises of 1983 and the Prospects for Advanced Capitalist Economies
Hyman P. Minsky 284

14 Marx, Keynes, and Minsky on the Instability of the Capitalist Growth Process and the Nature of Government Economic Policy
James R. Crotty 297

Part Six: Summary Statements

15 Marx, Keynes, and Schumpeter: A Synthesis with Special Emphasis on the Contributions of Michal Kalecki
Tracy Mott 327

16 Reflections on Economics and Morality: Hegel, Marx, and the Neoclassical Tradition
Dale Jamieson 336