

From Nuremberg to Hollywood

The Holocaust and the Courtroom in American Fictive Film

JAMES JORDAN

VALLENTINE MITCHELL
LONDON • PORTLAND, OR

Contents

Introduction	1
Part One: The Nuremberg Precedent	17
1. André de Toth's None Shall Escape (1944): Bearing Witness to the Holocaust in the Courtroom before Liberation, before Nuremberg	31
2. After Nuremberg, 1946–1961: Film within Film in The Stranger (1946), Sealed Verdict (1948), Verboten! (1959) and Judgment at Nuremberg (1961)	59
Part Two: After The Watershed	95
3. From Out of the Shadows: Operation Eichmann (1961), QB VII (1974) and The Man in the Glass Booth (1975)	103
4. The Fallibility of Memory and the Return of the Flashback: Music Box (1989) and Perry Mason and the Case of the Desperate Deception (1990)	129
5. The Domestication of the Holocaust: Skokie (1981) and Never Forget (1991)	151
6. Re-Viewing the Situation: Nuremberg (2000) and the Crime of the Century at the End of the Century	171
Conclusion	195
Epilogue	199
Bibliography and Filmography	211
Index	231