

Organization and Technology in Capitalist Development

William Lazonick

*Professor of Economics
Barnard College
Columbia University in the City of New York,
US*

Edward Elgar

Contents

Introduction: Placing History at the Service of Economics	vii
PART I ORGANIZATION AND TECHNOLOGY IN THE BRITISH ECONOMY
1. 'The Decline of the British Economy: An Institutional Perspective', with Bernard Elbaum, Journal of Economic History , 44 (2), June 1984, 567–83.	3
2. 'Factor Costs and the Diffusion of Ring Spinning in Britain prior to World War I', Quarterly Journal of Economics , 96 (1), February 1981, 89–109.	20
3. 'Industrial Organization and Technological Change: The Decline of the British Cotton Industry', Business History Review , 57 (2), Summer 1983, 195–236.	41
4. 'The British Cotton Industry and International Competitive Advantage: The State of the Debates', with William Mass, Business History , 32 (4), October 1990, 9–65.	83
PART II ORGANIZATION AND TECHNOLOGY IN THE US ECONOMY
5. 'The "Horndal Effect" in Early U.S. Manufacturing', with Thomas Brush, Explorations in Economic History , 22 (1), January 1985, 53–96.	143
6. 'The Breaking of the American Working Class' (a review essay on David Montgomery, The Fall of the House of Labor), Reviews in American History , 17, June 1989, 272–83.	187
7. 'The Basic Analytics of Shop-Floor Value Creation', Appendix to William Lazonick, Competitive Advantage on the Shop Floor , Harvard University Press, 1990, 333–52.	199
8. 'Strategy, Structure, and Management Development in the United States and Britain', in Kesaji Kobayashi and Hidemasa Morikawa, eds, Development of Managerial Enterprise , University of Tokyo Press, 1986, 101–46.	219
9. 'Organizational Capabilities in American Industry: The Rise and Decline of Managerial Capitalism', Business and Economic History , second series, 19, 1990, 35–54.	265
Index	285