

Parliament and Democratic
Consolidation in Southern Europe:
Greece, Italy, Portugal, Spain and Turkey

Edited by
Ulrike Liebert and Maurizio Cotta

Pinter Publishers, London and New York

Contents

Notes on contributors	viii
Acknowledgements	xi
Part I. Theoretical perspectives	1
1. Parliament as a central site in democratic consolidation: a preliminary exploration U. Liebert	3
2. Parliaments, consolidation, institutionalization: a minimalist view G. Di Palma	31
Part II. Parliamentary practice in southern Europe: some case studies	53
3. The 'centrality' of Parliament in a protracted democratic consolidation: the Italian case M. Cotta	55
4. By consociationalism to a majoritarian parliamentary system: the rise and decline of the Spanish Cortes J. Capo Giol, R. García Cotarelo, López Garrido and J. Subirats	92
5. The difficulties of 'rationalization' in a polarized political system: the Greek Chamber of Deputies N. Alivizatos	131
6. Revolutionary transition and problems of parliamentary institutionalization: the Case of the Portuguese National Assembly M. Braga da Cruz and M. Lobo Antunes	154
7. Cyclical breakdown, redesign and nascent institutionalization: the Turkish Grand National Assembly E. Kalaycioglu	184
Part III. Comparative perspectives	223
8. Political parties, parliaments and democratic consolidation in southern Europe: empirical and theoretical perspectives G. Pridham	225
9. Parliaments in the consolidation of democracy: a comparative assessment of southern European experiences U. Liebert	249