

EVENTS OF GRACE

Naturalism, existentialism, and theology

CHARLEY D. HARDWICK

The American University, Washington D.C.

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Preface	page xi
List of abbreviations	xv
PART I FOUNDATIONS FOR A NATURALIST CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY	I
1 Prospects for a naturalist theology	3
The appeal of a naturalist theology	5
Initial parameters for a naturalist theology	18
2 Physicalism and philosophical naturalism	33
Nonreductionist physicalism	34
Physicalism and the objectivity of value	51
A valuational theism: placing religion in a physicalist world	61
PART 2 BRIDGE PRINCIPLES FOR A NATURALIST CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY	73
3 Existence in faith: naturalism and existentialist interpretation	75
Naturalism and the analysis of existence: can Heidegger be a naturalist?	78
Demythologizing and existentialist interpretation	82
The existentialist interpretation of faith	104
4 Grace and the knowledge of God	115
Grace as event	116
Faith as an existential orientation toward creative transformation	140
Events of grace and the knowledge of God	150

5	Christian faith as a seeing-as	158
	Seeings-as in the philosophy of religion	159
	The case for a theistic seeing-as	179
	The normative case for the Christian witness of faith	190
 PART 3 FURTHER ELEMENTS OF A NATURALIST CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY		 207
6	The point of Christology	209
	The question Christology answers	211
	Making the point of christology and the role of the "historical"
	Jesus	228
	Christology and creative transformation	243
7	The promise of faith	254
	Naturalism and the absurdity of existence	254
	Death and the promise of faith	265
Appendix On the referential status of transformative events		288
Bibliography		291
Index		301