General Preface xi
Notes on Contributors xiii

1. Introduction 1
Malka Rappaport Hovav, Edit Doron, and Ivy Sichel
1.1 Overview 1
1.2 Linguistic representations of event structure 1
1.3 Specific issues and the structure of the volume 4
1.3.1 Lexical representation 5
1.3.2 Argument structure and the compositional construction of predicates 8
1.3.3 Syntactic and semantic composition of event structure 12
1.4 A tribute to Professor Anita Mittwoch 16

Part I Lexical Representation

2. Reflections on Manner/Result Complementarity 21
Malka Rappaport Hovav and Beth Levin
2.1 Roots and event schemas 23
2.2 The lexicalization constraint 25
2.3 Refining the notions of manner and result 26
2.4 Manner and result as scalar and non-scalar changes 28
2.4.1. Scalar changes 28
2.4.2. Non-scalar changes 32
2.5 A motivation for the lexicalization constraint 33
2.6 The lexicalization constraint in a larger context 35
2.7 Concluding remarks 36

3. Verbs, Constructions, and Semantic Frames 39
Adele E. Goldberg
3.1 Semantic frames: profile and background frame 39
3.2 Verbs 41
3.3 Previously proposed constraints on a verb meaning 42
3.3.1 Exclusively causally related subevents? 42
3.3.2 Exclusively manner or result/change of location? 46
3.3.3 Verb meanings must evoke established semantic frames 50
3.3.4 The existence of a frame does not entail that a verb exists to label it 51
3.4 Predications designated by combinations of verb and construction 51
\hspace{1em} 3.4.1 Constraints on combinations of verb and construction 53
\hspace{1em} 3.4.2 Frames, verbs, and constructions 56
3.5 Conclusion 57

4. Contact and Other Results 59
 Nomi Erteschik-Shir and Tova Rapoport
4.1 The theory of atoms 61
4.2 Alternating contact verbs 68
4.3 ‘Splash’—similar but different 71
4.4 Conclusion 75

5. The Lexical Encoding of Idioms 76
 Martin Everaert
5.1 Defining properties of idioms 77
5.2 (Non-)compositionality 82
5.3 Structuring the lexicon 87
\hspace{1em} 5.3.1 Idioms as part of the lexicon 87
\hspace{1em} 5.3.2 Lexical redundancy 89
5.4 The lexical representation of idioms 92
\hspace{1em} 5.4.1 Approaches to the lexical encoding of idioms 92
\hspace{1em} 5.4.2 Lexical selection 94
5.5. Conclusion 97

Part II Argument Structure and the Compositional
Construction of Predicates

6. The Emergence of Argument Structure in Two New Sign
Languages
 Irit Meir 101
6.1 History and social settings of two new sign languages 103
6.2 Relevant aspects of sign language structure: referential system and verb agreement 105
6.3 Method: sentence production elicitation task 108
6.4 Emergence of argument structure: initial stages 108
| 6.4.1 Tendency towards one-argument clauses | 109 |
| 6.4.2 Subject = 1\textsuperscript{st} person | 110 |
| 6.5 Later developments: emergence of grammatical systems | 112 |
| 6.5.1 Word order | 112 |
| 6.5.2 Verb agreement | 116 |
| 6.6 Conclusion | 120 |

7. Animacy in Blackfoot: Implications for Event Structure and Clause Structure

Elizabeth Ritter and Sara Thomas Rosen

| 7.0.1 Organization | 126 |
| 7.1 Blackfoot finals do not express event structure | 126 |
| 7.1.1 Stop vs. Finish in Blackfoot | 129 |
| 7.1.2 No ambiguity with almost in Blackfoot | 130 |
| 7.1.3 The imperfective paradox in Blackfoot | 131 |
| 7.1.4 Summary | 133 |
| 7.2 Blackfoot finals do not express argument structure | 133 |
| 7.2.1 Different verb classes, same argument structure | 134 |
| 7.2.2 Cross-clausal transitivity alternations | 136 |
| 7.2.3 Transitivity alternations due to non-thematic benefactive objects | 137 |
| 7.2.4 Summary | 138 |
| 7.3 Animacy, agency, and verb classification | 139 |
| 7.3.1 Intransitive inanimate (II) verbs lack an external argument | 140 |
| 7.3.2 Some intransitive animate (IA) verbs have an external argument | 143 |
| 7.3.3 Summary | 146 |
| 7.4 Finals are light verbs (v) | 147 |
| 7.5 Conclusion | 151 |

8. Lexicon versus Syntax: Evidence from Morphological Causatives

Julia Horvath and Tal Siloni

| 8.1 Setting the stage | 155 |
| 8.2 Two types of causatives | 158 |
| 8.2.1 Diagnostics: biclausal versus monoclausal structure | 160 |
| 8.2.2 Interim evaluation | 164 |
| 8.3 No access to syntactic structure | 165 |
| 8.3.1 Causativization of coordinations | 165 |
| 8.3.2 Causativization of raising predicates | 168 |
8.4 The formation of morphological causatives
8.4.1 Causatives formed in the syntax
8.4.2 Lexical causatives
8.4.3 A note on the lex-syn parameter

9. On the Morphosyntax of (Anti)Causative Verbs
Artemis Alexiadou
9.1 Setting the stage
9.2 Structures and morphological patterns of (anti)causatives
9.2.1 The structures
9.2.2 The morphological patterns
9.2.3 Marked anticausatives are not passive
9.2.4 The distribution of the two patterns makes reference to verb classification
9.3 English de-transitivization processes
9.4 Productivity of the alternation
9.5 Conclusion

10. Saturated Adjectives, Reified Properties
Idan Landau
10.1 The basic facts
10.1.1 The alternation: basic vs. derived EAs
10.1.2 The possessor role is necessary
10.1.3 DerA is necessarily stage-level w.r.t. the possessor
10.1.4 Internal arguments in DerA
10.2 The analysis
10.2.1 First clue: evaluative nouns
10.2.2 The R relation (reification)
10.2.3 Unselective saturation
10.2.4 Building up EAs
10.2.5 Explaining the properties of EAs
10.3 The broader relevance of R and SAT
10.4 Conclusion and further implications

Part III Syntactic and Semantic Composition of Event Structure
11. Incremental Homogeneity and the Semantics of Aspectual for-Phrases
Fred Landman and Susan Rothstein
11.1 Two problems
11.2 Previous accounts 230
11.3 Predicate types which allow modification by aspectual for-phrases 234
11.4 Our proposal 235
   11.4.1 Aspectual for-phrases in event semantics 235
   11.4.2 Incremental homogeneity 236
   11.4.3 Interpretation of sentences with bare plurals 239
11.5 Accounting for the facts about aspectual for-phrases 241
   11.5.1 States/activities and accomplishments/achievements 241
   11.5.2 Cases that are analysed as statives 243
   11.5.3 Gnomic readings of predicates with bare plurals 244
   11.5.4 Episodic readings of predicates with bare plurals 245
11.5.5 A note on eating for three hours 247
11.5.6 Achievements 248
11.5.7 Iterations 249

12. Event Measurement and Containment 252
   Anita Mittwoch

12.1 The length of atelic eventualities 253
12.2 Why no double measuring 254
12.3 The length of telic eventualities 257
12.4 Further peculiarities of telic adverbials 258
   12.4.1 Constraints on modifiers of the numeral 258
   12.4.2 Relative shortness 261
   12.4.3 Modified quantifiers inside the incremental argument of the verb 263
   12.4.4 Discontinuity 264
   12.4.5 Questioning 264
12.5 Comparison with the take construction 264
12.6 Conclusion 265

13. Draw 267
   Christopher Piñón

13.1 Drawing in Hungarian 270
13.2 Analysing draw 275
13.3 A comparison with Forbes (2003) 279
13.4 Conclusion 282

14. Morphological Aspect and the Function and Distribution of Cognate Objects Across Languages 284
   Geoffrey Horrocks and Melita Stavrou

14.1 Cognate objects across languages 285
