

National Identity and Political Thought in Germany

*Wilhelmine Depictions of the French Third Republic,
1890–1914*

MARK HEWITSON

CLARENDON PRESS • OXFORD

CONTENTS

List of Tables	xi
1. INTRODUCTION: GERMANY AND THE FRENCH NATION	I
1. National Comparison in the Modern Age	I
2. Three Types of French Nation	12
3. German Depictions of France	16
4. Plan of the Book	27
2. THE GERMAN RECHTSSTAAT AND THE FRENCH POLITICAL STATE	30
1. Politics and the State	30
2. Law, Legality, and Justice	36
3. The Dreyfus Affair	50
3. THE MERGER OF EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE COMPETENCIES	66
1. President, Senate, and Assembly	66
2. Party and Faction	83
3. Bureaucracy and Bureaucratization	98
4. UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE AND THE SPECTRE OF DICTATORSHIP	111
1. Equality, Individualism, and Control	111
2. Competence and Corruption	129
3. Caesarism and the Danger of Collapse	139
4. Republic faute de mieux	155
5. GERMAN REJECTION OF THE FRENCH PARLIAMENTARY REPUBLIC	159
1. Diplomats and Statesmen	159
2. Conservatives	171
3. The Centre Party	182
4. The SPD	190
5. Liberals	202

6. CONCLUSION: POLITICS AND THE GERMAN NATION-STATE	213
1. German Perceptions of France's Political Decline	213
2. Parliamentarism and Constitutionalism	220
3. Lawyers, Parties, and Political Regimes	227
4. National Comparison and Constitutional Crisis	243
5. Political Thought and National Identity	252
 Select Bibliography	 260
 Index	 285