

Hans Abrahamsson

Seizing the Opportunity

Power and Powerlessness
in a Changing World Order

The Case of Mozambique

Padrigu

Department of Peace and Development Research Gothenburg University

Contents

Acknowledgement	i
A note on vocabulary	iii
A note on figures	iv
Abbreviations and acronyms	v
Prologue	1
Introductory summary	9
P A R T I - The Research Approach	33
I. Conceptual framework: understanding world order and change	37
II. Theoretical guidance: describing forces of change	65
III. Analytical model: identifying forces of change	83
IV. Methodological consideration: producing the knowledge	107
P A R T II - The Empirical Findings	119
V. World order under stress: reinforced contradictory circumstances	121
From Bretton Woods to Pax Americana	127
Embedded contradictions	131
The exercise of structural power	139
The post-Cold War era and reinforced contradictory circumstances	153

VI. U.S. in Southern Africa: coinciding interests and change	165
Hegemony and decolonisation	165
East - West rivalry in Southern Africa	180
Consensus under stress	202
VII. Mozambique and the Washington Consensus: a troublesome relationship	207
Setting of the scene	207
The penetration by the world order structures	212
The failure of the Washington Consensus	229
Rural contradictory circumstances	238
The need for an Alternative Development strategy	249
VIII. Room for manoeuvre: towards a structural opportunity for change	257
Towards legitimate governance in Africa	259
Global regionalisation versus local intra-regional cooperation	270
Contradictory global prospects	276
Coinciding interests and counteracting forces	295
Concluding reflections	301
Epilogue	309
Main sources and references	319