Nelio Oliveira

Automated Organizations

Development and Structure of the Modern Business Firm

Physica-Verlag
A Springer Company

Contents

1 Introduction 1

Part I Traditional Structures

2 Organizational Structure, Format, Shape, Design and Architecture 7
2.1 Structure and Characterization of Organizations 7
2.2 Basic Elements of a Structure: Differentiation and Integration 10
2.3 Notes 12

3 Types of Structure 15
3.1 Initial Concerns with Structure: Prescriptions for an Ideal Format ... 15
3.2 Bureaucracy: An Attempt to Describe an Organizational Format 17
3.3 Informality and the Strengthening of the Classical Structure 19
3.4 The Questioning of the Pattern: Structuralist Studies 21
3.5 Classifications of Structures: Contingency Approach Researches 22
3.6 Notes 24

4 Henry Mintzberg's Five Basic Configurations 27
4.1 The Consistency in the Formation of Structure 27
4.2 Structural Possibilities, Coordination Mechanisms and Contingency Factors 28
4.3 The Main Configurations 30
4.3.1 The Simple Structure 30
4.3.2 The Machine Bureaucracy 31
4.3.3 The Professional Bureaucracy 32
4.3.4 The Divisionalized Form 34
4.3.5 The Adhocracy 35
4.4 Final Comments on Structures and on the Five Configurations Model 36
4.5 Notes 37

Part II Changes in the Situational Factors

5 Automation and Its Consequences for Organizations: From Fordism to Information Technology 41
5.1 The Use of Machines in Firms 42
5.2 The Fordist Production Line 44
5.3 Numerical Control Technology 46
5.4 The Automation in Processing Production Firms 48
5.5 Information Technology and Automation in Organizations 53
5.5.1 Information Technology and the Automation in Manufacturing Operations 54
5.5.2 Information Technology and Information Systems 55
5.5.3 Information Technology and Automation in Service Operations 56
5.5.4 Summary of the Consequences of Information Technology-Based Automation 58
5.6 Notes 60

6 The Organizational Environment: From Continuity to Dynamism 65
6.1 Environmental Factors 66
6.2 Changes in the Environmental Factors 68
6.2.1 Changes in the Macro-environment 68
6.2.2 Changes in the Micro-environment 74
6.3 Changes Related to the Behavior of the Environmental Factors: Complexity and Dynamism 76
6.4 Notes 77

7 Organizational Strategy: From Integration to Specialization 83
7.1 Organizational Strategy 83
7.2 Traditional Strategies 85
7.3 Strategic Trends 87
7.3.1 New General Strategies 88
7.3.2 New Functional Strategies 91
7.3.3 The Responsibility for Developing the Strategy and the Strategy Development Process 94
7.4 Final Remarks on Strategies 95
7.5 Notes 95

Part III Internal Changes

8 New Organizational Possibilities 103
8.1 Antecedents of the New Organizational Possibilities 103
8.1.1 Management by Objectives 104
8.1.2 Strategic Business Units 104
8.1.3 Work in Teams and Parallel Organizations 105
8.1.4 Quality of Work Life 105
8.1.5 Organizational Development 106
8.1.6 Matrix Structures 106
8.1.7 Strategic Management 106
8.2 New Management Technologies and Models, New Structure Possibilities and Forms of Change Management 107
8.2.1 Total Quality Management 108
8.2.2 Lean Production 108
8.2.3 Reengineering 110
8.2.4 Outsourcing 111
8.2.5 Network Organizations 111
8.2.6 Learning Organizations 112
8.2.7 Entrepreneurship 113
8.2.8 Human Resource Strategic Management 114
8.2.9 Competency Management 115
8.2.10 Empowerment 116
8.2.11 Downsizing and the Flattening of Structures 116
8.3 Final Comments on the New Organizational Possibilities 117
8.4 Notes 118

9 New Coordination Mechanisms 123
9.1 Culture, Norms and Values in Organizations 123
9.1.1 Initial Discussion on and Antecedents of the Studies of Culture in Organizations 123
9.1.2 Informal Organization and the Introduction of Values in Organizational Studies 124
9.1.3 Organizational Culture and Its Recent Studies 126
9.1.4 Cultural Changes and Indoctrination 127
9.1.5 Criticism to Aspects Related to Organizational Culture 128
9.1.6 Culture as a Coordination Mechanism: Final Considerations 130
9.2 Contracts 131
9.2.1 The Use of Firm or the Use of the Market 132
9.2.2 Types of Contracts 134
9.2.3 The Increasing Use of Contracts as a Coordination Mechanism: Final Remarks 135

9.3 Interests, Power, Conflicts and Politics in Organizations 135
9.3.1 Favorable Conditions for the Use of Politics as a Coordination Mechanism 136
9.3.2 Politics as a Coordination Mechanism in Organizations: Final Considerations 139
9.4 Notes 139

Part IV The Automated Bureaucracy and Its Variations

10 The Automated Bureaucracy 147
10.1 Description of the Basic Structure 147
10.1.1 The Operating Core 147
10.1.2 The Middle Line 159
10.1.3 Support Staff and Technostructure 161
10.1.4 The Strategic Apex 162
10.2 Conditions for the Automated Bureaucracy 164
10.2.1 Technical Factors Concerning Production and Automation 164
10.2.2 The Environment for the Automated Bureaucracy 166
10.2.3 Strategy of the Automated Bureaucracy 168
10.2.4 The Use of Coordination by Contracts 172
10.3 The New Organizational Possibilities and the Automated Bureaucracy 173
10.3.1 Participatory and Incremental Changes in the Automated Bureaucracy: OD, TQM, and Learning Organizations 174
10.3.2 Concerns with People in the Automated Bureaucracy: Competency Management and Health, and the Strategic Management of People 174
10.3.3 Social Responsibility in the Automated Bureaucracy: Corporate Citizenship 175
10.3.4 Radical Changes in the Automated Bureaucracy: Reengineering and Downsizing 176
10.3.5 External Integration, Alliances, Partnerships, Outsourcing and Network Organizations 177
10.4 Problems Associated with the Automated Bureaucracy 177
10.4.1 Technical, Financial and Marketing Problems in the Automated Bureaucracy 178
10.4.2 Human Problems in the Operating Core 179
10.4.3 Problems at the Middle Line 182
10.4.4 Problems at the Strategic Apex 183

10.5 Other Issues Related to the Automated Bureaucracy 185
10.5.1 Unemployment and Precariousness of Work 185
10.5.2 Labor Relations 187
10.5.3 The Automated Bureaucracy and the Changes That Occur in Other Relationships in Society 188
10.6 Notes 189

11 Variations of the Automated Bureaucracy 201
11.1 The Automated Bureaucracy in Service Organizations 201
11.2 The Automated Bureaucracy and the Changes in the Professional Bureaucracies 206
11.3 The Automated Bureaucracy and the Small Firms 209
11.4 The Automated Bureaucracy and Processing Production Firms 212
11.5 The Automated Bureaucracy and the Adhocracy 214
11.6 Notes 216

Part V To Finish

12 Final Comments 221
12.1 The Existence of the Automated Bureaucracy 221
12.2 The Automated Bureaucracy as a Descriptive Structural Model 222
12.3 The Search for Consistency in the Appearance of the Automated Bureaucracy 222
12.4 The Automated Bureaucracy as a Supplement to Henry Mintzberg's Classification 222
12.5 A Seventh Configuration 223
12.6 The Limitations of This Study and the Need for Further Research 223
12.7 The Adhocratic Future That Didn't Arrive 224
12.8 The Automated Bureaucracy's Positive and Negative Aspects 225
12.9 Notes 226

Bibliography 227