

LEADING OPEN INNOVATION

edited by Anne Sigismund Huff, Kathrin M. Möslin, and Ralf Reichwald

The MIT Press
Cambridge, Massachusetts
London, England

Contents

Acknowledgments xi

I WHY AND HOW OPEN INNOVATION WORKS 1

1 Introduction to Open Innovation 3

Anne Sigismund Huff, Kathrin M. Möslin, and Ralf Reichwald

Definitions of Open Innovation 5

Why Open Innovation Now? 7

Purpose of This Volume and Chapter Overviews 8

Potential Problems of Open Innovation 13

The Promise of Open Innovation 14

Conclusion—Leading Open Innovation 15

2 Open Innovation at Siemens AG 19

Thomas Lackner

The Innovation–Market Connection 19

Leveraging Existing Technology into New Markets 21

Innovation at Siemens 22

Open Innovation 25

Potential Problems of Open Innovation 27

Examples of Open Innovation Projects Underway at Siemens 28

An Ideal Picture of Siemens as an Open Innovator 31

Idea for Innovative Leaders: Bring Knowledge-Holders Together 31

Further Investigation 33

3 The Need for Speed: Fostering Strategic Agility for Renewed Growth 35

Yves Doz

Research Approach 35

Focus on Successful Competitors in the IT Industry 37

A Successful and Widely Accepted Recipe for Success	37
The Relationship between Past Success and Current Difficulties	39
The Cumulative Effect of Growing Rapidly	42
Escaping the Rigidities Caused by Success	46
Achieving Greater Resource Fluidity and Increasing Teamwork at the Top	49
Conclusion	50
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Pay Attention to Emotion	51
4 Leading Innovation	55
Rudolf Gröger
Background to Becoming CEO of O ₂	55
The Most Important Characteristics of Leadership	56
Vision Is Central	57
Market Position Is Important	58
Becoming CEO of VIAG Interkom	58
Vision as the Basis of Turnaround	59
Actions after Targets Were Established	61
Communicating a Complex Agenda	62
The Centrality of Open Leadership	64
Dealing with Resistance to Change	65
Conclusion	66
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Share the Need to Do Everything All at Once	67
5 Open Innovation: Actors, Tools, and Tensions	69
Kathrin M. Möslin
Three Types of Innovators in Open Innovation	70
Tools for Open Innovation	72
Conclusion: Inherent Tensions of Open Innovation	81
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Learn from Those Who Successfully Balance Open and Closed Innovation	83
II WHO CONTRIBUTES TO OPEN INNOVATION?	87
6 Opening Organizations for Innovation	89
John Bessant and Bettina von Stamm
Exploration versus Exploitation	89
The Innovation Lab	95
Search Routines to Support Discontinuous Innovation	96

Conclusion: Turning New Opportunities into Company Routines	101
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Prepare Your Company to Absorb Outside Ideas	102
7 Cooperation for Innovation	105
Lynda Gratton
Hot Spots	106
Identifying and Understanding Hot Spots	106
How Do Organizations Break away from Current Practice?	107
The Need for Balance	109
Igniting Purpose	111
Making Signature Processes	112
Conclusion: Priorities for Leaders and Researchers Interested in Creating Hot Spots	115
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Organizational Structures Facilitate Cooperation	116
8 User Innovation	117
Eric von Hippel
Open User Innovation	117
Importance of Innovation by Users	118
Why Many Users Want Custom Products	122
Users' Innovate-or-Buy Decisions	123
Users' Low-Cost Innovation Niches	124
Why Users Often Freely Reveal Their Innovations	126
Innovation Communities	128
Adapting Policy to User Innovation	129
Summary	133
9 Co-creation with Customers	139
Frank Piller and Christoph Ihl
Structuring Customer Co-Creation	142
Two Dyadic (Individual) Based Co-creation Methods	143
Two Network (Community) Based Co-creation Methods	146
Conclusion: Next Tasks for Co-Creation	149
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Recognize the Power of NIH (Not Invented Here)	150
10 Contributions by Developers	155
Karim R. Lakhani
The Revolution Changing the Way We Can Think about Innovation	155
The Principles of Open Source Innovation	157
Why Contribute?	159

The Community's Role in Motivating Input	160
What Leaders of Distributed Innovation Do	161
What Business Can Learn from Open Source Development	162
Examples of Open Source Development	163
The Characteristics of Winning Problem Solvers	167
Conclusion: The Importance of Collaboration	167
Ideas for Innovative Leaders: Learn to Post Problems and Consider Providing More Information to Open Communities	168
11 Strategic Crowdsourcing: The Emergence of Online Distributed Innovation	171
J. Andrei Villarroel
The Rise of Crowdsourcing	171
The Encyclopedia Revolution: When Excellence Meets Digitization and Crowdsourcing	172
Crowdsourcing as Organizational Design	174
The Competitive Advantage of Crowdsourcing	175
Online Distributed Organization: The End of One Era, the Beginning of Another	177
Online Distributed Innovation as an Extension to the Firm	185
The ODI Platform: A Strategic Dynamic Capability of the Firm	188
Conclusion: Implications of Crowdsourcing for Innovation	189
Mini Case A—Facebook Translations	191
Mini Case B—Netflix Prize	192
III TRENDS IN OPEN INNOVATION	201
12 Educating Open Innovation Ambassadors	203
Anne-Katrin Neyer and Nizar Abdelkafi
Designing a Teaching Tool for Educating Open Innovation Ambassadors	204
Case Study: University of Erlangen-Nuremberg	206
Conclusion: Toward Open School	215
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Live What You Teach	217
13 Viral Marketing on Facebook for a New Open Innovation Platform	221
Catharina van Delden and Nancy Wunderlich
The Power of Social Media	222
innosabi's Vision	223
How Market Research Helped Design the Perfect Open Innovation Platform	224
Conclusion	236
Idea for Innovative Leaders: Engage Communication	237

14 The Future of Crowdsourcing: From Idea Contests to MASSive Ideation	241
Johann Füller, Katja Hutter, and Julia Hautz
One Example of an Innovation Contest: The OSRAM Design Contest/LED Emotionalize Your Light	242
Difficulties and Hurdles Arising from Online Innovation Contests	243
MASSive Ideation: A New Approach	248
Discussion/Conclusion	258
15 Open Manufacturing	263
Mitchell M. Tseng
An Example of Open Manufacturing: Shanzhai Cell Phones	265
Value Chain Differences	267
Quality and Innovation	269
Other Examples of Open Manufacturing	271
Labor Participation in Open Manufacturing: New Employment	272
Conclusion: Coordination as the Center of Open Manufacturing	274
Ideas for Innovative Leaders: Enable Open Manufacturing by Orchestrating Idea Flows and Material Flows	275
Epilogue: Learning to be More Competitive, More Cooperative, and More Innovative	279
Anne Sigismund Huff, Yves Doz, and Karim R. Lakhani
How Open Innovation Fits into Organizational Strategy	279
Unlearning Competitive Habits	280
Examples of New Ways of Thinking and Working	281
Learning to Be Part of a Cooperative/Competitive Ecosystem	282
Learning from Lean Environments	284
Advice to Newcomers	286
The Changing Definition of Strategy	287
Future Absorption of Open Innovation	289
Peter and Hannelore Pribilla's Vision for Practical Research	293
Ralf Reichwald
Contributors	295
Index	309