

The Foundations of Non-Equilibrium Economics

The principle of circular and cumulative causation

Edited by Sebastian Berger

Contents

Notes on contributors	ix
Foreword	xii
Acknowledgements	xiv
1 Introduction	1
SEBASTIAN BERGER
2 On competing views of the importance of increasing returns, cumulative causation and path-dependence	12
JOHN McCOMBIE AND MARK ROBERTS
3 Cumulative causation and Northeast Asian post-war industry policy	43
PHILLIP TONER AND GAVAN BUTLER
4 Cumulative causation and industrial development: the regional stage	65
GEORGE ARGYROUS AND GEOFF BAMBERRY
5 Nicholas Kaldor and cumulative causation: public policy implications	77
RICHARD P. F. HOLT AND STEVEN PRESSMAN
6 The principle of circular and cumulative causation: Myrdal, Kaldor and contemporary heterodox political economy	91
PHILLIP ANTHONY O'HARA
7 Circular cumulative causation à la Myrdal and Kapp	106
SEBASTIAN BERGER

8 Utilizing the social fabric matrix to articulate circular and cumulative causation for conceptual conclusions	119
F. GREGORY HAYDEN
9 Unnatural depletion and artificial abundance: a circular cumulative causation analysis of salmon fisheries and some implications for political ecological economics	130
SEBASTIAN BERGER AND JAMES EDWARD GLAVIN IV
10 Circular and cumulative causation in the classics: anticipations, family resemblances, and the influence on Post Keynesian economics	154
MATHEW FORSTATER AND MICHAEL J. MURRAY
11 Peirce, Veblen, and the introduction of cumulative causation into economic science	172
JOHN HALL AND OLIVER WHYBROW
12 Veblen's cumulative causation and the origins of money in Mesopotamia	178
ALLA SEMENOVA
Index	195