

836 922 956

How to Build M&E Systems to Support Better Government

Keith Mackay

Contents

v	Foreword
vii	Acknowledgments
ix	Abbreviations
1	1 Introduction
5	PART I—WHAT DO MONITORING AND EVALUATION HAVE TO OFFER GOVERNMENTS?
7	2 What Is M&E?—An M&E Primer
9	3 Contribution of M&E to Sound Governance
17	4 Key Trends Influencing Countries—Why Countries Are Building M&E Systems
21	PART II—SOME COUNTRY EXPERIENCE
23	5 Good Practice Countries—What Does “Success” Look Like?
25	6 Chile
31	7 Colombia
37	8 Australia
45	9 The Special Case of Africa
51	PART III—LESSONS
53	10 Building Government M&E Systems—Lessons from Experience
61	11 Incentives for M&E—How to Create Demand
65	PART IV—HOW TO STRENGTHEN A GOVERNMENT M&E SYSTEM
67	12 The Importance of Country Diagnosis
73	13 Preparing Action Plans

81	PART V—REMAINING ISSUES
83	14 Frontier Issues
89	15 Concluding Remarks
91	PART VI—Q&A: COMMONLY ASKED QUESTIONS
103	Annexes
105	A: Lessons on How to Ensure Evaluations Are Influential
109	B: A Country Diagnosis—The Example of Colombia
129	C: Terms of Reference for an In-Depth Diagnosis of Colombia’s M&E System
133	D: Evaluation of IEG’s Support for Institutionalizing M&E Systems
137	E: Glossary of Key Terms in M&E
145	Endnotes
151	Bibliography