

Two Dragon Heads

Contrasting Development Paths for Beijing and Shanghai

Shahid Yusuf
Kaoru Nabeshima

THE WORLD BANK
Washington, D.C.

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
About the Authors	xiii
Abbreviations	xv
Chapter 1. Introduction and Overview	1
Strategies for Beijing and Shanghai	6
Rethinking Urban Development	8
Chapter 2. China's Development and Its Megacities	11
Seven Factors Contributing to Chinese Success	13
Outlook for the Future	20
Chapter 3. Manufacturing Industry: Locomotive for Innovation and Growth	25
Why a Broad Manufacturing Base Matters	28
The Case for Complex Capital Goods	29
Industrial Productivity and Innovation	36
Chapter 4. Pitfalls of Early Deindustrialization	49
Expansion of Services	51
Five Stylized Tendencies and Their Implications	61
Chapter 5. . . . Economic Composition, Resources, and the Emerging Innovation Potentials in Beijing and Shanghai	69
The Industrial Economy	69
The Financial Sector	89
Labor and Skills	94
Tertiary Education and the Innovation System	96
Innovation Outcomes	119
Venture Capital	129
Megacities: Moving to a More Innovative Economy	134

Chapter 6. Making Industries Innovative	137
Urban Strategy and Policy Directions	143
Concluding Observations	182
References	185
Index	213

Figures

2.1 GDP Composition of China, 1979–2006	12
2.2 Share of Exports in GDP and Growth of Exports in China, 1979–2007	12
2.3 Foreign Direct Investment Inflow to China, 1990–2007	15
3.1 Relationship between the Share of Manufacturing and Per Capita Income, 1960–2007	26
3.2 Relationship between the Share of Manufacturing and Growth for OECD Countries, 1961–2007	27
3.3 Relationship between the Share of Manufacturing and Growth for East Asian Economies, 1961–2007	27
3.4 R&D Spending as a Share of Sales	39
3.5 R&D Intensity by Industry in 10 OECD Countries	39
3.6 Top R&D Spending Sectors among Top 1,000 R&D Spenders	40
3.7 Share of U.S. Patents by Industry, 1986	42
3.8 Share of U.S. Patents by Industry, 2006	43
5.1 GDP Composition, 1995–2007	71
5.2 Share of Establishments, 1995	78
5.3 Share of Establishments, 2004	79
5.4 Share of GVIO, 1995	79
5.5 Share of GVIO, 2004	80
5.6 GVIO in Shanghai, by Ownership Categories, 1994–2007	81
5.7 GVIO in Beijing, by Ownership Categories, 1995–2007	83
5.8 Full-Time Equivalent of R&D Personnel	84
5.9 R&D Expenditure by Different Organizations, 2000–06	84
5.10 Distribution of R&D Expenditure in Shanghai, by Type of Activity, 2001–06	104
5.11 Distribution of R&D Expenditure in Beijing, by Type of Activity, 2002–07	104
5.12 R&D Expenditure in Shanghai, by Type of Institution, 2001–06	105
5.13 Locations of R&D Investments by MNCs, 2004	107
5.14 Prospective R&D Locations Considered Most Attractive, 2005–09	108
5.15 Number of Papers Published in International Journals, 1998–2005	124
5.16 Number of Scientific Papers Published in International Journals According to Science Citation Index, 1998–2005	124
5.17 Changes in Share of New Product Output in Shanghai, 1994–2006	126