

Promoting Enterprise-Led Innovation in China

Chunlin Zhang,
Douglas Zhihua Zeng,
William Peter Mako, and
James Seward

THE WORLD BANK
Washington, DC

Contents

Acknowledgments		xi
Abbreviations		xiii
Executive Summary		xv
Chapter 1	Pursuing a Balanced Strategy	1
	The 2006 S&T Program	1
	Purpose and Scope of This Study	2
	A Broad Definition of Innovation	3
	The Scale of Chinese Innovation	3
	The Achievements of Chinese Innovation	7
	The Contribution of Innovation to China's Current Economic Success	10
	The Innovation Challenges Faced by China	11
	Pursuing a Balanced Strategy	16
	Conclusions	21
Chapter 2	Creating the Right Incentives	23
	Who Performs R&D in China?	25
	Making SOEs More Innovative	29
	Strengthening External Incentives	35

	Raising the Demand for Innovation	40
	Conclusions	46
Chapter 3	Building the Capacity of Private Enterprises	49
	China's Emerging Private Enterprises	49
	Innovation Activities of Chinese Private SMEs: A Close-Up	52
	Effectively Managing Human Resources for Innovation	57
	Facilitating the Collaboration of SMEs with RDIs and HEIs	66
	Enhancing Innovation Services	73
	Conclusions	81
Chapter 4	Strengthening the Ecosystem for the Venture Capital Industry	83
	The Ecosystem for the VC Industry	86
	The Domestic VC Industry in China	91
	Strengthening the Ecosystem for the VC Industry	98
	The Role of the Government in Supporting the VC Industry	107
	Conclusions	109
Chapter 5	Moving Forward with Actions	111
	Balanced Strategic Thinking	112
	Innovation-Supporting Policies	112
	SME-Specific Programs	114
	Key Issues for Further Study	116
Notes		119
References		127
Index		135