

ROMANTICISM AND COLONIALISM

Writing and Empire, 1780–1830

EDITED BY
TIM FULFORD
AND
PETER J. KITSON

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Notes on contributors	page vii
Acknowledgements	xi
1 Romanticism and colonialism: texts, contexts, issues Tim Fulford and Peter J. Kitson	1
2 Romanticism and colonialism: races, places, peoples, 1785–1800 Peter J. Kitson	13
3 Romanticism and colonialism: races, places, peoples, 1800–1830 Tim Fulford	35
4 Accessing India: Orientalism, anti-‘Indianism’ and the rhetoric of Jones and Burke Michael J. Franklin	48
5 ‘Sunshine and Shady Groves’: what Blake’s ‘Little Black Boy’ learned from African writers Lauren Henry	67
6 Blood Sugar Timothy Morton	87
7 ‘Wisely forgetful’: Coleridge and the politics of Pantisocracy James C. McKusick	107
8 Darkness visible? Race and representation in Bristol abolitionist poetry, 1770–1810 Alan Richardson	129

9	Fictional constructions of Liberated Africans: Mary Butt Sherwood Moira Ferguson	148
10	'Wandering through Eblis'; absorption and containment in Romantic exoticism Nigel Leask	165
11	The Isle of Devils: The Jamaican journal of M. G. Lewis D. L. Macdonald	189
12	Indian Jugglers: Hazlitt, Romantic Orientalism, and the difference of view John Whale	206
13	'Some samples of the finest Orientalism': Byronic Philhellenism and proto-Zionism at the time of the Congress of Vienna Caroline Franklin	221
14	'Once did she hold the gorgeous East in fee . . .': Byron's Venice and Oriental Empire Malcolm Kelsall	243
15	The plague of imperial desire: Montesquieu, Gibbon, Brougham, and Mary Shelley's The Last Man Joseph W. Lew	261
	Index	279