

The Soldier Experience in the Fourteenth Century

Edited by

Adrian R. Bell and Anne Curry

with Adam Chapman, Andy King and David Simpkin

THE BOYDELL PRESS

Contents

List of Contributors	vii
List of Abbreviations	ix
Introduction	I
1 Military Service and the Dynamics of Recruitment in Fourteenth-Century England Andrew Ayton	9
2 Total War in the Middle Ages? The Contribution of English Landed Society to the Wars of Edward I and Edward II David Simpkin	61
3 A Warlike People? Gentry Enthusiasm for Edward I's Scottish Campaigns, 1296–1307 Andrew Spencer	95
4 Edward I's Centurions: Professional Soldiers in an Era of Militia Armies David Bachrach	109
5 Who's afraid of the Big Bad Bruce? Balliol Scots and 'English Scots' during the Second Scottish War of Independence Iain A. MacInnes	129
6 Rebels, Uchelwyr and Parvenus: Welsh Knights in the Fourteenth Century Adam Chapman	145
7 Breton Soldiers from the Battle of the Thirty (26 March 1351) to Nicopolis (25 September 1396) Michael Jones	157
8 Towards a Rehabilitation of Froissart's Credibility: The Non Fictitious Bascot de Mauléon Guilhem Pépin	175
9 The English Reversal of Fortunes in the 1370s and the Experience of Prisoners of War Rémy Ambühl	191
10 The Soldier, 'hadde he riden, no man ferre' Adrian R. Bell	209
Index	219