

ROOTS OF RED CLYDESIDE 1910 – 1914?

LABOUR UNREST AND INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS IN WEST SCOTLAND

SUB Göttingen
208 431 128

7

98 A 5529

Edited by
WILLIAM KENEFICK
and
ARTHUR McIVOR

JOHN DONALD PUBLISHERS LTD
EDINBURGH

Contents

Acknowledgements	iii
Contributors	iv
Introduction: Roots of Red Clydeside, c. 1910–1914? Arthur McIvor and William Kenefick	1
1. The labour unrest in West Scotland, 1910–14 Glasgow Labour History Workshop	18
2. Were Clydeside employers more autocratic?: Labour management and the ‘labour unrest’, c1910–1914 Arthur McIvor	41
3. Strike patterns and employers’ responses: Clydeside in comparative perspective Ricky Devlin	66
4. Philosophers in overalls?: Craft and class on Clydeside, c1900–1914 Alan McKinlay	86
5. ‘Striking women’: Cotton workers and industrial unrest, c1907–1914 William Knox and Helen Corr	107
6. A struggle for control: The importance of the great unrest at Glasgow harbour, 1911 to 1912 William Kenefick	129
7. Militant miners?: Strike activity and industrial relations in the Lanarkshire coalfield, 1910–1914 Sandy Renfrew	153

Roots of Red Clydeside 1910–1914?

8.-	The United Turkey Red strike, December 1911 George Rawlinson and Anna Robinson	175
9.	A clash of work regimes: 'Americanisation' and the strike at the Singer Sewing Machine Company, 1911 Glasgow Labour History Workshop	193
10.	Glasgow's municipal workers and industrial strife Irene Maver	214
11.	'From industrial unrest to industrial debacle'?: The labour left and industrial militancy, 1910–1914 James Smyth	240
	Index	259