

Human choice and climate change

VOLUME ONE
The societal framework

EDITED BY
Steve Rayner
Elizabeth L. Malone

Pacific Northwest National Laboratory

Contents

Foreword	ix
The International Advisory Board
Preface	xi
Gerald M. Stokes
Introduction	xiii
Steve Rayner & Elizabeth Malone
Why the concern with climate change?	xiii
Why the concern with human choice?	xiv
The conceptual architecture of this assessment	xviii
Human choice and climate change, volume 1: the societal framework of climate change	xx
Human choice and climate change, volume 2: climate change, resources, and technology	xxvii
Human choice and climate change, volume 3: the tools of policy analysis	xxxiv
Human choice and climate change, volume 4: what have we learned?	xxxix
References	xlii
1 Science and decisionmaking	1
Sheila Jasanoff & Brian Wynne
Scientific knowledge and public policy	7
Knowledge production: contingency to stabilization within the scientific community	16
Going public: the cultural shaping of credibility	37
Knowledge without borders	47
Modeling environmental systems and climate change	59

CONTENTS

Conclusion	74
References	77
2 Population and climate change	89
F. Landis MacKellar, Wolfgang Lutz, A. J. McMichael, Astri Suhrke
Population situation and outlook	92
Population in the global climate change debate	119
Population and the environment	135
Health	151
Refugees, migration, and resource conflicts	161
Conclusion: population policy and global change	173
References	181
3 Human needs and wants	195
Mary Douglas, Des Gasper, Steven Ney, Michael Thompson
Wants and global climate change	196
Human needs and global climate change	204
Human needs in the Western tradition	221
Power and violence in the Western tradition	230
Measuring the needs of social beings	236
Needs in a unified social theory	250
Conclusion	259
References	260
4 Cultural discourses	265
Michael Thompson & Steve Rayner
Expert and lay perceptions of climate change	266
Collective representations of nature	279
Climate change diagnosis and prescriptions	289
Equity issues in climate discourses	306
Equity, institutions, and solidarity	321
A two-dimensional map of institutional discourse and human values	331
Conclusion	335
References	337

5	Institutional frameworks for political action	345
	Timothy O’Riordan, Chester L. Cooper, Andrew Jordan, Steve Rayner, Kenneth R. Richards, Paul Runci, Shira Yoffe
	International relations theory and the changing political landscape	352
	The growing role of environment in international politics	364
	International solidarity through science	368
	The Framework Convention on Climate Change	370
	Policy networks and subsystems	387
	Institutional learning	394
	Policy instruments	401
	Conclusion	423
	References	429
	Sponsoring organizations, International Advisory Board, and project participants	441
	Contents of Volumes 1–4	446
	Index of names	447
	Subject index	469