

A cat's lick
Democratisation and minority communities in the post-Soviet Baltic

Timofey Agarin

Amsterdam - New York, NY 2010

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Abbreviations	xi
Foreword by David J. Galbreath	xv
Introduction	1
1. The challenges of post-communist democratisation	3
2. Case study: The Baltic states	5
3. A note on terminology: The minority communities	7
4. Structure of the book	10
Chapter 1—Explaining post-communist democratisation	15
1. Consolidation of the democratic regimes	15
2. Democratisation and society	20
3. Civil society in post-communism	27
4. Conclusion	31
Chapter 2—Ethno-territorial proliferation in the Soviet Baltic	37
1. Economic development and the demographic shift	38
2. The making of the Soviet people	45
3. Dissent and contention in the Soviet Union	52
4. The impact of affirmative action on Russian-speakers	55
5. Conclusion	59
Chapter 3—Baltic perestroika and nation-building	65
1. Baltic nationalism awakened	66
2. Baltic pro-Soviet movements: The counterforce?	70
3. Cultural nationalism of Lithuania's Sajūdis	79
4. Estonia and Latvia: The cases of ethnonationalism?	87
5. Conclusion	93
Chapter 4—State-building and framing of non-titulars	99
1. Design of political membership in Estonia and Latvia	100
2. Crafting the status of the state languages	108
3. Language enforcement	113
4. Internationalisation of minority politics	118
5. Conclusion	127

Chapter 5 –Titularisation of Baltic education	135
1. Language teaching	136
2. Introducing bilingual education programmes	143
3. Changes in school curricula	152
4. Conclusion	161
Chapter 6 –Minority cooptation in the Baltic societies	169
1. Multicultural in form, national in content	170
2. The instruments of minority integration	179
3. Diluted outcomes of integration	186
4. Cooptation as a model of integration	195
5. Conclusion	202
Chapter 7 –The Language of alienation	209
1. Minorities’ proficiency in the state language	210
2. The Russian language information space	218
3. Language sabotage? Minority/majority dialogue	227
4. Consequences of linguistic segregation	234
5. Conclusion	240
Chapter 8 –Minority representation in social structures	249
1. Employment and social status of non-titulars	250
2. Russian-speakers in public office	257
3. Minority political representatives	263
4. Conclusion	274
Chapter 9 –Minority engagement in civic initiatives	281
1. Civil society in the Baltic states: An oxymoron?	283
2. Minorities’ cooperation with the state	289
3. Civic initiatives supporting co-ethnics	296
4. Minorities’ engagement in policy advising	305
5. Conclusion	310
Conclusion –Baltic democratisation: A cat’s lick?	317
1. Minority and majority in the making	318
2. Institutions as tools of democratisation	322
3. Implications for studies of democratisation	327
Bibliography	333