

Studies in Economics and Russia

Alec Nove

*Professor Emeritus
University of Glasgow*

M
MACMILLAN

Contents

Preface	vi
PART I HISTORY OF ECONOMIC IDEAS	1
1 Three Early Russian Economists	3
2 M. I. Tugan-Baranovsky (1865–1919)	24
PART II ECONOMIC HISTORY	41
3 War Communism	43
4 Lenin and the New Economic Policy	50
5 Trotsky, Markets and East European Reforms	71
6 The End of NEP	80
7 The Soviet Peasantry in the Second World War	90
8 Industry under Khrushchev	104
9 Russian Modernization	114
PART III ECONOMICS: EAST AND WEST	127
10 Planning	129
11 Markets? Yes but . . .	144
12 Friedman, Markets and Planning: A Comment	153
13 The Fragmentationist Disease	164
14 Marxism and 'Really Existing Socialism'	171
15 Planning and Markets	222
16 'Feasible Socialism' Revisited	232
17 Soviet Reforms and Western Neoclassical Economics	244
PART IV CONTEMPORARY USSR	263
18 Has Soviet Growth Ceased?	265
19 Labour Incentives in Soviet Kolkhozy	290
20 Soviet Agriculture	302
21 The Contribution of Imported Technology to Soviet Growth	312
22 The Defence Burden: Some General Observations	325
23 Is Within-system Reform Possible?	340
24 Soviet Economic Reform: Progress and Frustrations	355
Index	367