

Forward Studies Series

SHAPING ACTORS, SHAPING FACTORS IN RUSSIA'S FUTURE

Foreword by Jérôme Vignon

Office for Official Publications of the European Communities

Contents

Foreword	ix
Jérôme Vignon, Director, Forward Studies Unit
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1. Shaping actors, shaping factors in Russia	3
1.1. The main players and their self-interests	3
1.1.1. Who are the main political players?	3
1.1.2. What new role for the regions?	12
1.1.3. Will the military and the enforcement agencies remain politically neutral?	15
1.1.4. Who are the economic players?	20
1.1.5. Organized crime	24
1.1.6. The Russian Orthodox Church	26
1.1.7. The emergence of democratic features	28
1.1.8. Weak civil society	33
1.1.9. Media dominated by the government and the new capitalists	36
1.1.10. The public as a player in elections	38
1.2. The main factors	39
1.2.1. Popular disorientation	39
1.2.2. Nationalist temptations	43
1.2.3. Great Power nostalgia	48
1.2.4. Poor economic prospects	56
1.3. Interactions of players and factors and resulting tendencies	62

1.3.1.	Towards democracy or authoritarianism?	62
1.3.2.	Towards a market economy with the capacity to integrate into the world economy?	65
1.3.3.	A nation respectful of its new neighbours or an empire again?	67
1.3.4.	Russia/occupied by internal reform or threatening to the outside world?	69
2.	Scenarios for Russia: The year 2000 and beyond	73
2.1.	Scenarios for Russia	73
2.1.1.	Bases for scenarios	74
2.1.2.	Which scenario is relevant?	74
2.2.	Why Russia will not revert to Communism	75
2.2.1.	The Communist system cannot be revived	75
2.2.2.	What would happen if people voted Communist?	79
2.3.	Five scenarios for Russia's future	82
2.3.1.	Muddling through	82
2.3.2.	Benign authoritarianism	89
2.3.3.	Malign authoritarianism	96
2.3.4.	Weak centre	102
2.3.5.	Gradual democratization	106
2.4.	Which scenarios are relevant for the year 2000 and beyond?	110
2.4.1.	Past experience of reforms	111
2.4.2.	Russia by the year 2000	112
2.4.3.	Russia beyond the year 2000	114
2.4.4.	Conclusions	115
3.	Ukraine: balancing between East and West	119
3.1.	Introduction	119
3.2.	External factors	119

3.3. Internal factors	122
3.3.1. The struggle for national cohesion	123
3.4. Main players	126
3.5. Democratic elements	129
3.6. Interactions between players and factors and tendencies	129
Summary	133
Selected bibliography	137
The Forward Studies Unit	139