

Henryk Głębocki

A DISASTROUS MATTER

THE POLISH QUESTION IN THE RUSSIAN
POLITICAL THOUGHT AND DISCOURSE
OF THE GREAT REFORM AGE, 1856–1866

Translated by Teresa Bałuk-Ulewiczowa

Jagiellonian University Press

Contents

List of important abbreviations	9
The following abbreviations have been used for archival references	11
Introduction.....	13
Chapter I: The Polish Question in the debate on the modernisation of Russia in the Great Reform Period, 1856–1861	17
1) Russia gathers up its strength in the thaw after Sebastopol. The political and ideological geography of Russia	17
2) Poland in the opinion of the ruling class of the Russian Empire	34
3) The Polish example in the debate on the modernisation of Russia	42
4) Russian liberal concepts of Polish-Russian co-operation (before 1861)	55
5) A different Russia: The concept of an anti-tsarist alliance	65
6) Poland in the opinions of the Slavophiles and Pan-Slavists	70
A) “Long live all the nations!”	70
B) Between historiosophy and the policy of Pan-Slavism	73
Chapter II: An attempted policy of “reconciliation,” 1861–1863.....	89
1) The Polish problem and the question of a Russian constitution.....	89
A) The discussion in the Russian elite on the Polish Developments	89
B) The reversal in the social mood, 1862.....	102

2) The Slavophile programme on the Polish Question.....	108
A) From Slavophile ideology to policy	108
B) The lure of Pan-Slavism and an experiment to effect a “policy of reconciliation” with the Poles.....	115
C) The “dangerous party of legal reform”	121
3) The Lithuanian and Ruthenian Territories in the dispute on the solution to the Polish Question	127
A) The Seized Territories in the Polish and Russian political thought to the mid-nineteenth century	127
B) The dispute over the Lithuanian and Ruthenian Territories in Slavophile journalism.....	131
C) An Empire of Many Nations? The Seized Territories in the light of concepts of autonomy and Russia’s federalisation.....	134
D) Plans for an ethnic policy of Divide et Impera on the Empire’s western peripheries.....	142
Chapter III: 1863 in the official propaganda.....	151
1) Evolution of attitudes in Russian society.....	151
A) A reversal in public opinion	151
B) Causes of the change in the mood of Russian public opinion	158
C) Constitutional illusions	162
2) “What to do about Poland?” The Polish Question in Mikhail Katkov’s ideology of conservative nationalism.....	169
A) Fighting the Polish conspiracy	169
B) Conservatism and nationalism	182
3) “The Poles are setting Russia on fire...” The official Russian propaganda on the January Uprising	186
A) Propaganda: “The Most Powerful Tool of Our Times”	186
B) The Russian Truth and the Polish Grievance : Propaganda addressed to the common people.....	201
C) How the foreign propaganda worked.....	210
Chapter IV: Concepts of a final solution to the Polish Question, 1863–1866.....	217
1) Russian liberalism and its attitude to the Polish Question, 1863–1866.....	217
A) Liberal attitudes after 1863: in defence of the State	217
B) Liberal attitudes after 1863: in defence of the agenda of reconciliation	223

2) Plans to “Re-Slavicise” Poland.....	233
A) The “War on the West” and against “the Judas of Slavdom.” The Polish-Russian conflict as a clash of civilisations	233
B) How to “slavicise” Poland.....	235
C) What the Russians are fighting for against the Poles. The Slavophile principles behind the Constituent Committee’s agenda	237
D) The Okrainy (Borderlands) of Russia. Drafts for a new imperial policy on nationalities	242
E) “The Decomposition of Slavophilism.” The dispute over the Polish policy	246
3) The crusade against “Polonism.” The Constituent Committee and its activities.....	251
A) The Tsar’s commissars at work: the Russian “Peasants’ Empire” and a People’s Poland	251
B) A Russian Kulturkampf	263
Epilogue.....	279
Selected Bibliography	287
Index of Persons.....	323