

Figural Philology

Panofsky and the Science of Things

Adi Efal

Bloomsbury Academic

An imprint of Bloomsbury Publishing Plc

B L O O M S B U R Y

LONDON • OXFORD • NEW YORK • NEW DELHI • SYDNEY

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
1 Philological rationality and the constitution of the history of art	1
2 Archimedean points: Monuments as duration reservoirs	15
Panofsky's Riegl	16
Philological imperatives in Riegl's methods	18
The curse and the blessing in the study of artworks	21
Art history as Korrektur of monuments	22
Riegl's Alterswert	26
Kunstwollen and meaning	28
Philological reproduction of past realities	30
3 Forms and figures: Two fundamental modes of pictorial production	33
Forms and figures within the pictorial domain	33
Figuration in the history of art	36
The figural situation	37
Figuration and meaning	39
Forms and figures	40
From the plastic to the pictorial	44
4 Pictorial validities in art and history	49
Panofsky's Idea and the disclosure of the iconoclastic structure	51
Ideas between truth and reality in Idea	52
Auerbach's 'Figura': Plasticity and history	54
'Real and historical': The figural mechanics of validation	57
Reality, value and truth: Two versions of realist argumentation	58
Iconophilic method	60
5 Sub figuralitate historiae	63
The figure and the reality of the past	67
Figural and historical meaning	68

6	Iconological space: Panofsky with Warburg	75
	Panofsky's historical space-time	75
	Simmel's historical time	77
	Warburg's art history and philology	79
	Warburg's philological gaze	83
	Vitalisms and archaism	86
	Iconology and philology	88
7	The figural synthesis of historical reality in the iconology table	91
	Synthesis	92
	Symbols, ideas and values	95
	From symbolical value to synthetic intuition	99
	Intuition and synthesis	100
	Figural synthesis	102
8	Philology's recollective habitus: Panofsky with Spitzer, Auerbach and Curtius	105
	The Aristotelian distinction between memory and recollection	107
	Two modes of memory	108
	The role of figures in recollection	110
	Humanism as a recollective activity	111
	Hylomorphist humanism	113
	Figural distinction: A model for the recollective disjunction	114
	Elastic hylomorphism	116
9	Figural content and the past as a res extensa	119
	Iconoclasm, iconism and the reality of the past	120
	The past reality of a work versus historical meaning	122
	The two unseen prototypes of the artwork	124
	Vanishing point and carrying surface: Spatialities of historical explication	125
	Past reality of works and the reality of the past	130
	The distance between the reality of the past and the historical reality of a work	131
	Nonseen and figured	133
	Conclusion: Towards a figural philology	135
	The domain	135
	Historical meaning, past reality, historical reality	136
	Philological production	137

Figural synthesis	137
Distinctive realism	138
Untemporal history	139
Moderate historicism	140
Panofsky	141
Notes	143
Bibliography	185
Index	203