

Architecture in the Age of Printing

Orality, Writing, Typography, and Printed Images in the History of Architectural Theory

Mario Carpo

translated by Sarah Benson

The MIT Press Cambridge, Massachusetts London, England

Contents

Preface to the English Edition	vii
1. Prologue: Architectural Culture and Technological Context	1
2. Vitruvius, Text and Image	16
3. Architectural Knowledge in the Middle Ages: Orality and Memory versus Script and Image	23
I Rules without Models	23
II Models without Images	36
4. Architectural Drawing in the Age of Its Mechanical Reproduction	42
I Serlio	42
II Rome in the 1540s	56
III Paris in the 1540s	71
5. Geneva	79
I Triumph and Censorship of the Printed Book	79
II North and South: Books versus Images, Images without Books, Images in Books	81
III Illustrated Books and Architectural Treatises in Geneva	88
IV Serlio's Orders, Vitruvianism, and the Protestant World	96

6.	Decline and Fall of Typographic Architecture	103
	I From Shute to Vignola	103
	II From Gesner to Possevino	109
7.	The Turning Point of 1450: Abstract Rules versus Standardized Components in Albertian Theory	119
	I Alberti	119
	II Francesco di Giorgio	124
	III Filarete	131
	Notes	141
	Bibliography of Frequently Cited Works	224
	Name Index	237