

ARBITRATION AND COMPLEX INTERNATIONAL CONTRACTS

With Special Emphasis on the Determination of the Applicable Substantive Law and on the Adaptation of Contracts to Changed Circumstances

Joachim G. Frick

PD Dr. iur., LL.M.
Rechtsanwalt / Attorney at Law

Schulthess

Index

Foreword	XV
Part 1: Complex International Contracts	1
Chapter I: Introduction: Complex International Contracts and Commercial Arbitration	3
1. Notion of Complex International Contracts	3
a. Environment	3
b. Examples	4
c. Generally accepted definition?	5
2. International Arbitration as usual dispute resolution mechanism for Complex International Contracts	7
3. The substantive rules applicable to Complex International Contracts	8
a. Importance of the question of the applicable law	8
b. The trend for softening rules regarding determination of the applicable law	10
c. Complex International Contracts and Lex Mercatoria	11
Chapter II: Legal Characteristics of Complex International Contracts	14
1. Most legal systems focus on domestic and discrete contracts	14
a. Phenomenon	14
b. Problems	15
c. The absence of court decisions	16
d. Solutions in the practice of international trade	17
2. The characteristics of Complex International Contracts	18
a. Importance	18
b. Long term duration	19
c. Technicality/volume	20
d. Probability of disturbance, uncertainty	20
e. Sensitivity for disturbance	22
f. Complexity	23
g. Number of parties involved	25
h. Interdependence, cooperation and solidarity	25
3. Demarcations	28
a. Exchange contracts/discrete contracts	28
b. Partnership contracts	30
c. "Relations of duration" ("Dauerschuldverhältnisse")	30

Chapter III:	The Need to Preserve Complex International Relationships	32
1.	Transaction specific investments	32
2.	Complex International Contracts as Relational Contracts	33
3.	Complex International Contracts between contract and firm	35
4.	Symbiotic Relationship, Mutual trust	36
5.	The weakening of the principle of pacta sunt servanda	38
a.	Reasons and importance	38
b.	Forms of appearance	39
c.	The theory of a reduced binding force of long-term contracts	40
6.	Conclusion	42
Part 2:	The Law Applicable to Complex International Contracts	43
Chapter IV:	Determination of the Applicable Law through Conflict Rules	45
1.	Choice of the applicable law by the parties	45
2.	Possible solutions: The Choice of the applicable conflict rules by the arbitrators	48
3.	The absence of a lex fori according to the modern theory of international arbitration	48
4.	Relationship between conflict of law rules, applicable substantive law and arbitration	50
5.	The rules applicable in ad hoc arbitrations and institutional arbitrations	53
6.	The new generation of "flexible" conflict rules	54
a.	Modern rules with regard to the law applicable to the merits in arbitration	54
b.	Article 187 Sect. 1 IPRG; Par. 1051 Sect. 2 DZPO	56
7.	Advantages of the modern, "soft" rules	60
a.	Flexibility	60
b.	Predictability	61
8.	The "most significant relationship" test of the Second Restatement	63
9.	Mandatory character of the modern rules?	65
10.	Conclusion	66
Chapter V:	Applying Art. 187 of the Swiss IPRG	68
1.	Problem	68
2.	The guidelines for the arbitrators applying Art. 187	68
a.	Art. 187 describes a result, not a specific technique	68

b.	Reference to conflict of law rules (exclusion of the "voie directe")	70
c.	The exclusion of a formalistic approach based on statutory presumptions	70
d.	Relevance of the substantive facts of the dispute in question and the expectations of the parties	72
3.	Methods to specify the closest connection criterion	73
a.	Introduction	73
b.	Joint Application of the Conflict Rules	74
c.	Application of General Principles of Conflict of Laws	76
4.	Conclusion	78
 Chapter VI: "Voie Directe": The "Direct Method" of Determining the Applicable Law		79
1.	The direct method ("voie directe") of selecting the applicable law	79
2.	"voie directe" and Art. 187 IPRG	80
a.	The opinion of the majority	80
b.	Textual interpretation	81
c.	Legislative history	82
d.	Teleological interpretation	83
e.	Conclusion	85
3.	Marginal difference in the application?	86
4.	"voie directe" and Complex International Contracts	86
 Chapter VII: Anational Law (Lex Mercatoria)		88
Section 1: Origin, content and limits of the lex mercatoria		88
1.	Origin	88
2.	Foundations of the lex mercatoria	89
3.	The interrelation between lex mercatoria and international commercial arbitration	92
4.	Content and sources	93
5.	The skepticism about the lex mercatoria	96
 Section 2: Application of the lex mercatoria by arbitral tribunals		98
1.	The controversy about the application of the lex mercatoria under Art. 187 Sect. 1 IPRG	98
2.	The non-problematic cases	99
a.	Express or implicit choice of lex mercatoria by the parties	99
b.	The application of trade usages as referred to by national law	102
3.	The remaining, problematic cases	103
a.	Conflict rules do not exclude "non-national" law	103
b.	Conflict rules do not require a "geographical localization"	106

c. Are lex mercatoria rules "legal rules"?	106
d. Conclusion: The applicability of the lex mercatoria in the remaining cases	112
Section 3: Lex Mercatoria and Complex International Contracts	117
1. When has the lex mercatoria a close connection to the dispute; when are the rules of lex mercatoria "appropriate"?	117
a. Problem	117
b. Negative Indication: The conflict rules do not give a definite result	117
c. Positive Indication: Denationalized, international business contracts	120
2. Case law	122
3. The risks of the application of the lex mercatoria	125
4. Conclusion	129
Chapter VIII: Remedy Against the Arbitrators' Choice of Law?	130
1. Applicable rules	130
a. "Primary Control" of arbitral awards in the arbitration forum	130
b. "Secondary Control" in the enforcement forum (Art. V of the New York Convention of 1958)	131
c. Comparison	131
2. Exces de pouvoir (Excess of Power)	132
3. Violation of the ordre public	134
a. In general	134
b. Ordre public and application of the lex mercatoria	137
4. Case law	139
5. Conclusion	141
Part 3: Adjustment of Contracts	143
Chapter IX: The Desire for Contract Adaption	145
1. The need for adaptation and the absence of adaptation clauses	145
2. Pacta sunt servanda as fundamental principle	145
3. Adaptation and gap-filling	146
4. Agreement vs. gap model?	147
5. The relative notion of contractual gaps	149
6. The concept of facilitated adaptation of Complex International Contracts	150

7.	Economic Aspects of the effects of facilitated adjustment of Complex International Contracts	152
a.	Bad policy?	154
b.	Expectations of the parties	156
c.	Good faith requires cooperation	157
d.	Efficiency argument not convincing	160
e.	Superior risk bearer	163
f.	Adjustment and specific performance	165
g.	Rational Planning	166
Chapter X:	Contractual Adaption Clauses	168
1.	Classification	168
a.	Introduction	168
b.	Open contracts	169
c.	Flexible contracts	170
2.	The most common adaptation clauses	171
a.	Definitions	171
b.	Variation and Change Orders by one of the parties	171
c.	Automatic adaptation clauses	172
d.	Stabilization Clauses (negative adaptation clauses)	174
e.	General Review and Renegotiation Clauses	175
3.	Relief from and Changes in Contractual Liability: Force Majeure, Hardship, and Special Risk Clauses	177
a.	Introduction	177
b.	Description of the Triggering Events	177
c.	Unforeseen or Unforeseeable Events	179
d.	Events Beyond the Control of a Party	179
e.	The legal effects of Force majeure and hardship clauses	179
4.	Conclusion	181
Chapter XI:	Renegotiation Duty?	182
1.	Definition	182
2.	The cases of a duty to renegotiate	182
3.	Renegotiation duty based on the relational character of the contract?	184
4.	Components of duty to renegotiate	185
5.	Sanction for breach of a renegotiation duty	186
6.	Rebuttal of a duty to renegotiate	188
Chapter XII:	The Power of Arbitrators to Adjust Contracts	190
1.	Problem	190
2.	The Scepticism about contract adaptation by third parties	191

3.	Interrelation between lex arbitri and substantive law	193
4.	Broad power of the arbitrators if not excluded by the lex arbitri	194
5.	"Schiedsgutachten"	198
6.	No Adaptation ipso iure	200

Chapter XIII: Substantive Law on Adaptation to Changed Circumstances in the Absence of Adaptation Clauses 201

1.	Adaptation of Contracts under Swiss and German law: Same theories, different notions	201
2.	The doctrines of "Wegfall der Geschäftsgrundlage" / "Clausula rebus sic stantibus" in the present German and Swiss Law	201
	a. The subjective theories	201
	b. The objective theories	203
	c. The theories of "good faith and fair dealing" (" Treu und Glauben ")	204
3.	Position of the Swiss Supreme Court	205
	a. Positive requirements	205
	b. Three negative conditions	207
	c. Legal effects of the Clausula rebus sic stantibus	207
4.	Position of the German Supreme Court	208
5.	Relevance of the nature of the contract	210
6.	Other legal systems	212
	a. French Law: force majeure and imprevision	212
	b. British common law: Frustration	214
	c. Italian Law: Excessiva onerosita	217

Chapter XIV: Facilitated Adaptation of Complex International Contracts under a Rule of Lex Mercatoria? 219

1.	Introduction	219
2.	Public law treaties, uniform principles, adaptation clauses	219
3.	Arbitration case law regarding contract adaptation	220
	a. ICC Case No. 2291	220
	b. ICC Case No. 1990	220
	c. S.E.E.E arbitration	221
	d. ICC Case No. 2291	221
	e. ICC Case No. 3189	222
4.	Conclusions	223

Part 4: Special Tools of Arbitration of Complex International Contracts	227
Chapter XV: Multi-Party Arbitration	229
1. Introduction	229
2. Definition and origin	229
3. Advantages	230
4. The problems of multi-party arbitration	231
a. Overview	231
b. The right to appoint an arbitrator and multi-party arbitration	233
c. Efficiency	235
5. Availability of multi-party Arbitration	236
a. Forced conciliation?	236
b. Interpretation of different arbitral clauses as referring to one tribunal	238
c. Appointment of same arbitrators for separate proceedings	238
d. Express multi-party arbitration clauses	239
Chapter XVI: Fast Track Arbitration	242
1. Idea	242
2. Definition	243
3. Origin	243
4. Examples of FTA proceedings	244
a. The first FTA case under ICC Rules	244
b. FTA under AAA Rules to determine the fair stock market value	246
5. Advantages	247
6. The limits of FTA	248
a. Advantages for the claimant	248
b. The potential for obstruction	249
c. Unsolved questions about enforcement	249
d. The price paid for speed	250
e. Quality of the awards	251
7. The requirement of an express stipulation of FTA by the parties	252
8. When should long-term contracts provide for FTA?	253
a. FTA as appropriate dispute resolution mechanism for long-term contracts	253
b. Limited dispute	253
c. Minimal cooperation of the parties can be expected	254
d. Availability of arbitrators and other involved persons	255
9. The procedural rules of FTA	256
10. Separate institutional rules for FTA?	257
11. FTA and ex aequo et bono decisions	259

12. The scepticism about FTA	259
a. The risks for international arbitration	259
b. Excess de pouvoir	260
c. Due process concerns	261
13. Conclusion	261
Part 5: Evaluation of the new trends	263
Section 1: Introduction	265
Section 2: Context of the trend to allow arbitrators to adjust contracts	265
1. Growing Acceptance of arbitration in the 20 th century	265
2. The concept of contract adaptation	267
3. Adaptation of contracts contributes to overcome the static character of traditional arbitration	268
a. Adversary character of modern "judicialized" arbitration	268
b. Timing and duration: traditional arbitration comes ex post	269
c. The psychology of the setting	270
d. Adaptation power as tool to overcome the static character of traditional arbitration	271
Section 3: Flexible determination of the applicable law and the delocalization of arbitration	272
1. Introduction	272
2. Definition and objective	272
3. "Delocalization" or "a-nationality" in the context of the lex arbitri	273
4. "Delocalization" or "a-nationality" in the context of judicial control/enforcement	273
5. "Delocalization" or "a-nationality" in the context of the applicable substantive law	275
6. Arguments and counterarguments	276
7. Conclusions	278
a. Introduction	278
b. The Belgium and Swiss failure to comply with the system	279
c. Suggestions for a universal system of international commercial arbitration?	283
d. Final remarks	285
Summary	287