

6888

NATIONAL IDENTITY AND FOREIGN POLICY

Nationalism and leadership in Poland, Russia and Ukraine

ILYA PRIZEL

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Preface	page xi
Introduction: statement of arguments	1
1 National identity and foreign policy: a dialectical relationship	12
2 Polish identity 1795–1944: from romanticism to positivism to ethnonationalism	38
3 Poland after World War II: native conservatism and the return to Central Europe	75
4 Polish foreign policy in perspective: a new encounter with positivism	109
5 Russia's national identity and the accursed question: a strong state and a weak society	153
6 Russian identity and the Soviet period	180
7 Russia's foreign policy reconsidered	239
8 Ukraine: the ambivalent identity of a submerged nation, 1654–1945	300
9 Ukraine after World War II: birth pangs of a modern identity	339
10 Foreign policy as a means of nation building	372
11 Conclusion: national identity and politics in the age of the "Mass-Man"	404
Index	428