

English in Australia and New Zealand

An Introduction
to Its History,
Structure, and Use

Kate Burridge
and Jean Mulder

Melbourne
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Oxford Auckland New York

Table of Contents

Preface	x
Abbreviations	xiii
1 Sampling the Varieties	1
Introduction	1
Variation across space	3
Languages, dialects, and accents	4
The standard dialect	5
Regional variation	6
Social variation	10
Attitudes to variation	15
Educational implications	16
Points to remember	17
Exercises	18
2 The Making of English	21
Introduction	21
Determining genetic relationship: who's related to who(m)?	21
Sound correspondences	25
Hunting for cognates	26
Cognates or a question of chance	26
The Proto-Indo-European language family	27
Snippets from the history of English	27
Ancestral snippets from the history of English	27
More snippets from the later history of English	30
When do dialects become languages?	31
The development of Standard English	32
The beginning: Old English	33
The unfolding: Middle English	33
The golden age of prescription: Early New English	34
The development of English down under	36

The arrival of English down under	36
The rise of Antipodean accents	37
To prescribe or describe?	38
Can we bridge the gap?	40
Prescription and non-discriminatory language	42
Points to remember	43
Exercises	43

3 What's in a Sound 47

Introduction	47
X The sounds of OZ and NZ English	47
The speech organs	47
Describing consonants	50
Describing vowels	53
Transcribing sounds	55
Sounds and sound systems	57
Phones, phonemes, and allophones	57
Determining phonemes	59
Sounds in connected speech	60
X Variation in OZ and NZ English	62
Sounds in context	63
Syllable structure	64
Prosodic features	65
Points to remember	70
Exercises	70

4 Sounds across Time 75

Introduction	75
Types of sound change	75
Process versus change	76
Old sounds drop out	77
New sounds appear	78
Old sounds are modified	79
Phonetic versus phonemic change	81
Phonetic change: changes in accent	81
Phonemic change: changes that alter the system	82
Symmetry of change: The Great English Vowel Shift	85
Sound change in progress	87
Sounds and spelling change	89
The English spelling system	89
The sources of irregularity	90
Whose standard?	92
A question of reform	93
Points to remember	94
Exercises	94

5 What's in a Word?	99
Introduction	99
Identifying words	99
Lexemes versus words	101
Morphemes versus words	102
Types of morphemes	103
Lexical versus grammatical	103
Bound versus free	104
Roots, stems, and affixes	104
Compounds and bound roots	105
Derivational versus inflectional morphemes	106
Building words: derivation and inflection	108
Morphological processes	108
Productive morphemes	113
Representing morphemes	115
Morphemes, morphs, and allomorphs	115
Suppletion	118
Points to remember	118
Exercises	119
 6 Words across Time	 123
Introduction	123
Lexical change	123
Where do words come from?	124
Why do words die?	131
Semantic change	134
Consequences of semantic change	134
Why do words change their meanings?	137
Points to remember	143
Exercises	144
 7 Classes of Words	 148
Introduction	148
The major word classes	150
Nouns	151
Verbs	154
Adjectives	155
Adverbs	157
The minor word classes and subclasses	158
Pronouns	158
Auxiliaries	161
Prepositions	165
Conjunctions	166
Determiners	166
Points to remember	168
Exercises	168

8 What's in a Sentence?	173
Introduction	173
Sentence structure	174
How do we know there is structure?	174
Constituents	175
Determining constituent structure	176
Phrasal categories	179
Phrase structure rules	181
Basic clauses and functions	182
Why differentiate phrasal category and function?	182
Basic clauses	182
Functions	183
Clause patterns	189
Clause type	192
Clause type and clause meaning	192
Declaratives	193
Imperatives	193
Interrogatives	194
Exclamatives	195
Echoes	196
Points to remember	196
Exercises	197
 9 'Conjunction Junction'	 202
Introduction	202
Sentence type	203
Coordination	204
Subordination	205
Finite versus non-finite clauses	206
Types of finite subordinate clauses	207
Types of non-finite subordinate clauses	212
Verbless clauses	213
Functions of subordinate clauses	213
Clause combining and style	214
Points to remember	217
Exercises	218
 10 Discoursing on Discourse	 222
Introduction	222
Presenting information	223
End focus: given information before new information	223
Cohesive texts: topic followed by comment	225
Front focus: initial position gives extra focus	226
The principle of end-weight: 'heavy' elements come late	226

Discourse strategies	227
Movement that builds new structures	227
Movement that keeps everything intact	231
Styles of discourse: what makes a variety distinctive?	233
Speech versus writing	233
Occupational 'dialects'	237
Points to remember	242
Exercises	243
11 Structure across Time	249
Introduction	249
Synthetic to analytic: from Old English to Modern English	249
The loss of inflections	250
The rise of fixed word order	253
Planned versus unplanned discourse	256
Analogy: regularising the irregular	257
Verbs: well-hanged versus well-hung	257
Nouns: the story of -s	260
Grammaticalisation: creating grammar	261
Points to remember	266
Exercises	266
12 English Globe-Trotting	272
Introduction	272
Globalisation and English around the world	272
The two faces of globalisation: conformity and diversity	274
Global conformity: World English	275
Local diversity: striving for identity	280
What does the future hold?	289
Points to remember	290
Exercises	291
Glossary	295
Further Reading	313
References	317
Acknowledgments	327
Index	330