

Small States in Europe and Dependence

Otmar Holke (Ed.)

Wilhelm Braumüller

Universitäts-Verlagsbuchhandlung

Ges. m. b. H.

A-1092 Wien

Austrian Institute for International Affairs (AIIA)

A-2361 Laxenburg, Austria

CONTENTS

Preface.	7
Notes on the Contributors. ;	8
List of Participants.	11
List of Abbreviations.	12

Introduction: Towards a Broadening of the Small States Perspective. • - •	13
Otmar Holl

PART ONE: SMALL STATES THEORIES - HISTORICAL AND THEORETICAL REMARKS

1 Some Thoughts on the Scientific Applicability of the Small State Concept: A Research History and a Discussion.	35
Wilhelm Christmas-Möller

The problem. A short history of the small state approach. Discussion of the criticism. The problem of definition. Is it possible to identify specific small state behaviour? The problem of small state survival. Concluding remarks. Postscript.

2 Small States' Efforts in International Relations: Enlarging the Scope.	54
Hans Vogel

Introduction and summary. The problem. Some remarks on the "state of the art". The structurally determined behaviour patterns. The level of the "voluntary" strategies. The "management" of foreign economic relations.

3 Industrialized Small States — Some Comparative Considerations.	69
Anselm Skuhra

Introduction. Small states as behaviour units. Dimensions of small states dependence. Influences at the political system level.

4	Small States in Different Theoretical Traditions of International Relations Research	83
	Raimo Vdyrynen
	Introduction. Power politics. World-system analysis. Structural approach. Dependence approach. Towards a conclusion.

PART TWO: SMALL STATES AND DEPENDENCE. SOME EUROPEAN CASE STUDIES ; %

5	Dimensions of Small States' Dependence: The Case of Switzerland	107
	Margret Sieber
	Introduction. Size and dependence: Basic dimensions and concepts. The position of Switzerland with respect to "size" and "dependence". Conclusions.

6	Who is in Charge of the Destinies of Small States? The Case of Luxemburg	130
	Mario Hirsch
	Introduction. Experiences of a small country within the EEC. Conclusions.

7	Luxemburg — An Example of the Dependent Monetary System of a Small State	140
	Charles Doerner
	Some facts about Luxemburg. Luxemburg as an international banking center. The dualism of Luxemburg's monetary system. Conclusions.

8	Finland in the European Division of Labour.	145
	Kimmo Kiljunen
	Introduction. Integration into the European core. Trade and financial dependence. Industrial and technological dependence. Finnish-Soviet economic relations. Structural changes. Conclusions.

9	Dependence and State Structure: Foreign Firms and Industrial Policy in the Republic of Ireland.	164
	James Wickham
	Introduction. The role of foreign firms within the Irish economy. The political role of the Industrial Development Authority. Conclusion.

10 The Process of Internationalization and the Position of Austria. Problems and Current Development Trends of the "Austrian Model". 184

Ottmar Ho 11/Helmut Kramer

The process of internationalization and external linkage of the nation-states in the seventies and early eighties. Austrian society and its growing linkage with the international system. Conceptual analysis of "dependence". Austria's growing dependence — possible counter-strategies. The „Austrian Model". Austria — a peripheral country? The way into crisis — and out. Possible consequences for the dependence'dilemma and for the development of the foreign relations of national societies.

11 Austria and the International Media System: Relations and Dependences. Theses and Materials for Discussion. 220

Benno Signitzer/Hans Heinz Fabris

Internationalization versus national development. Dependence and inequality. Discussing a new "world information order". The role of international communication research. The historical example of the Austrian First Republic. Supporting material on Austrian media dependence. Communication policy and small state perspective. Strategies against dependence. New perspectives of research.

PART THREE: STRATEGIES AGAINST SMALL STATES' DEPENDENCE

12 Defensive Acquiescence: Making the Best out of Dependence. 239

Hans A. Mouritzen

Introduction. A shift of focus: From size to behaviour. In search of qualitative steps. Modes of adaptation: Are they "steps" in political life? Social groups under pressure. The concept of "defensive acquiescence". Modes of adaptation: Comprehensive or relation-specific? Some fundamental types of defensive acquiescence. Direct defensive acquiescence vis-a-vis an actor: Why so infrequent? Two illustrative hypotheses. Concluding remarks.

13 Active Foreign Policy as a Preventive Strategy Against Dependence. 262

Ole Elgstrdm

Active foreign policy as a preventive strategy against dependence. Preventive strategies. Active foreign policy. The development of Swedish neutral-

^
lj,

ity. Active foreign policy as a preventive strategy. Foreign aid. Criticism. Bridge-building.

14 Coping with Structural Security Threats.. 281

Bengt Sundelius

Introduction. The concept of national security. Risks. Opportunities. Coping with an interdependent environment. Strategic choices.

15 Austria's Permanent Neutrality and the Free Trade Agreement with the EEC: Strategies to Reduce Dependences?. 306*

Manfred Rotter

Avant propos. The concepts to be tested. Austria's permanent neutrality as an instrument for overcoming the status of total actual dependence between 1945 and 1955. The systemic dimension of Austria's permanent neutrality. The legal dimension of Austria's permanent neutrality. Austria's attitude towards the EEC. The structure of the EEC. The Free Trade Agreement between Austria and the Community in 1972. Critical analysis of the Free Trade Agreement. Conclusion.

16 Scale, Behaviour and Options. The Case of Sweden and General Considerations for the Future.. 329

Sven Tagil

Sweden and the concept of "small states". Sweden's small state behaviour. Sweden's international dependence. The small state and the concept of global solidarity. Alternatives for future action.